What Can She Do But Cry?

After surveying the wanton destruction of her belongings in her small, log-cabin home in the woods off the Old West road, Saanich, Mrs. Pat Cooper broke down and wept. "Everything's gone," she sobbed. "All my wedding presents. Everything." She lives on a welfare allotment of $50 a month, has to pay $25 toward a mortgage, in her husband's absence. Vandals Make Shambles Of Poor Woman's Home

Disaster Strikes Expectant Mother

By DAVE FRANCIS

A vicious vandal or gang of them yesterday invaded the Saanich log cabin of an expectant mother living on welfare, and turned her home into shambles.

Windows were broken, a stove upturned, dishes swept to the floor and broken, two radios smashed, furniture destroyed, food scattered—a picture of bedlam.

The four-room cabin of Mrs. Pat Cooper is in the woods at the end of Caldecotte road, an offshoot of Old West road, Saanich.

Mrs. Cooper's husband has been absent for nearly a month and she lives alone in the isolated house. Friday evening she returned home from a downtown shopping tour, fed her dog and its pup, and left again to spend the night at the home of her husband's parents in Esquimalt.

When she returned in the morning, her home was ravaged.

Yesterday, Mrs. Cooper showed The Daily Colonist through her rooms. Glass in the rear door was smashed.

'What Kind of Psychopath?'

"What kind of psychopath did this?" she asked. "It was deliberate vandalism. What did I ever do to deserve this?"

The kitchen floor was covered with a mess of broken glass, beans, flour, crackers, ketchup bottle, spices, rice, sugar, jello, waxed paper—all swept from kitchen cupboards.

"There's my food for the month," she said. "Look at it! All over the floor!"

Pointing to a small pup whose belly was distended with dog food scattered from a package by the vandal, she said, "Look at the way they bloated that poor little dog up."

"They gave the pup's mother a licking, the dirty beasts," Mrs. Cooper said.

A kitchen stove had been torn from its chimney and turned upside-down.

"No child could topple that stove over," she said. "It must have been a man bent on destruction."

Mrs. Cooper got out of hospital after a spinal fusion only last April 23 and moved into the cabin with her husband. Some of her goods had been still packed in cartons in the living room.

"You will never know how much work I have done here to make this nice," she said. "All that stuff packed in boxes is scattered around. I had a collection of miniature elephants. Look at them, smashed."

In her bedroom, the mirror top of a dresser had been broken, drawers were torn out and contents tossed around, bedding torn, curtains ripped down, a cupboard emptied.

Three budgies fluttered around the room, released from their cages, but unharmed.

Radio, Guitar Stolen

Missing from the home was a radio and a guitar. Two small radios were smashed.

The furniture, some of it damaged, had not yet been paid for, Mrs. Cooper said.

"I'm wondering how I can replace it. I don't know what I'm going to do. I don't know. I'd like to crawl in a hole somewhere and pull the cork in after."

Mrs. Cooper said she was going to stay at the home despite the destruction. "I'm going to stay here and clean up. I'm going to show them. Those devils can't force me out."

"This was our first home," she said.

Saanich welfare administrator Frank Heaton noted last night that Mrs. Cooper was living on only $50 a month relief and had a mortgage payment of $25 a month to meet.

"She hasn't got a hope in ages of fixing that place up," he said. "It sure burned me up when I heard about it. The poor girl has nothing to fall back on."

He said he planned on taking her some food last night, and Monday morning will help her make the cabin habitable.

He wasn't certain that emergency help could legally be given to a person whose home was destroyed by vandals.

"We will do what we can for her," he said, and offered to have any gifts from the public of household furnishings picked up and delivered.

Saanich police took pictures of the scene yesterday and are still investigating.

"The police told me to watch for anything that is not mine," Mrs. Cooper said, "but I can't see anything but mess right now."

"All my wedding presents are broken," she said. Mrs. Cooper was married two years ago.

She has kept a .22-calibre rifle at her home for protection, and says she is a good shot.

"I am going to get a permit for a .38-calibre gun, and then let somebody come near here," she said.

One Hen Too Many

Saanich chicken farmers have one fewer predator to contend with. Ol' Zip Coon has made his last kill. At 11.05 p.m. yesterday S. B. Hartford, 5035 Old West road, heard a commotion, saw the coon kill a hen and take to the trees. He spotted it with a flashlight, held it aloft while Mrs. Hartford called for help. H. Godfrey of 4760 West Saanich and Fred Shelldrake of 716 Beaver Lake road armed themselves and attended to Ol' Zip. Cpl. Algerian Rebels Slit Throats Of 12 Civilians

ALGIERS, Algeria (AP)—A band of Algerian rebels slashed the throats of 12 French civilians in a raid Friday night on a construction company camp in Eastern Algeria, it was learned here yesterday.

The rebels cut down the director of the French construction company, his wife, five technicians and five guards, while 30 Moslem workers scattered in panic.

Rescue troops found the two young children of the company chief and his wife huddled unharmed among the mutilated bodies.

The rebel band fled into the Aures mountains, 150 miles south of Constantine. French troops pursued them.

The raid took place as Algeria rocked under one of the worst waves of rebel violence and sabotage in the 18-month-old nationalist uprising.

Terrorists dynamited a big dam, fired grain storage depots, and threw grenades in crowded cities. French troops countered by killing at least 80 rebels in battles southeast of Algiers and far to the west near Oran.

Sudden new violence against the French flared also in the neighboring North African territories of Morocco and Tunisia.

The French announced they were building barbed wire entanglements along the Morocco-Algerian frontier to counteract Algerian rebel traffic across the border. About 30 miles of wire will be spotted in defiles along a rugged 300-mile stretch of the frontier.

The violence spread over Algeria as Premier Guy Mollet prepared to stake the life of his government on an assembly vote of confidence in his North African policies.

Worked for 'Isolation'

U.S. Congressman Nazi Collaborator

WASHINGTON (AP)—Long-secret documents made public Saturday recount that Nazi propagandists with thousands of dollars in hand collaborated with "a well-known Republican congressman" in trying to get the 1940 Republican party convention to adopt an "isolationist" platform.

No name was given for the congressman in captured German documents held secret for 16 years by British, French and American officials. They were made public without comment by the state department, but a footnote cited a keep-out-of-war newspaper advertisement published at the time over the signature of Hamilton Fish Jr., then a Republican representative from New York.

Fish, asked for comment, said he remembers the ad very well and he added, that in raising the money to pay for it, "not one cent came from German sources."

Many of the documents made public were cables to Berlin from Hans Thomsen, counsellor and man-in-charge at the German embassy in Washington in 1940, the last full year of peace for the United States before it entered the Second World War.

It was a year of struggle between so-called isolationists and interventionists in American politics. The struggle was heightened by the fall of France, Italy's entry into the war against the Allies and the American presidential election.

Reporting on this in a "most urgent top secret" cable of June 12, 1940 Thomsen told Berlin the isolationists apparently were losing out.

Looking to the 1940 Republican convention, opening within two weeks at Philadelphia, he proposed a two-part "well-camouflaged lightning propaganda campaign."

Quints Ignore Birthday

MONTREAL (CP) — For the first time in their 22 years the Dionne quints will not have a party to celebrate their birthday Monday.

Marie, proprietor of a newly-opened flower shop, says "the party we had after opening the shop last Saturday was our birthday party, too."

$260,000 Raised For Polio

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Association of Kinsmen clubs, a Canada-wide organization of young business and professional men, has raised over $200,000 for polio in B.C. in 1955-56, a Kinsmen official said Saturday.

Sixty-four clubs in B.C., with a total of more than 1,700 members, have spent an average of $4,150 each on community service work.

'There'll Be Changes . . .'

Royalty Blasted For Extravagance

LONDON (CP) — A British magazine has sharply criticized the Royal Family for lack of social responsibility.

The left-wing New Statesman and Nation, in an article mainly devoted to what it calls the "upper - class spending spree," says the Royal Family should help to avert such excesses by setting a better example themselves.

If not, says the magazine, "there will have to be some big changes at Buckingham Palace when Labor returns to power."

The unsigned article starts with a detailed description of the recent coming-out party at Claridge's Hotel given by Mrs. Arpad Plesch, wife of a Hungarian-born banker, for her daughter, Countess Bunny Esterhazy, and for her husband's granddaughter, Flockie Harcourt-Smith.

Quoting newspaper reports that the party cost between £5,000 and £10,000, The New Statesman argues that the splurge is symptomatic of an unparalleled binge by the upper classes at a time when the Conservative government is appealing to organized labor to go easy on wage and salary claims.

About the only thing that can be done is to have the topmost level of Britain's social pyramid, namely the Royal Family, "adapt the pattern of their social life a little more closely to the needs of mid-20th century Britain."

Log Flip Kills Workman

CAMPBELL RIVER—A logger, Joseph Oyhenart, 26, employed by Vasser Brothers Logging Co., at Forbes Bay in Homfray channel was killed yesterday in a logging accident.

RCMP who attended report Oyhenart appeared to be watching the clearing of a fouled-up logging haulback line when a log flipped and struck him. He died almost immediately.

ALL ABOARD

With G. E. Mortimore

ROLLING down the road to Fulford harbor on Salt Spring island, I became aware of a smell that carried me back to childhood. It was road dust.

Miles of highway on the island are tar surfaced, but the road from Beaver point to Fulford is gravel. The car sent the dust flying, and the smell reminded me in a flash of a thousand summer days, when most highways were dusty.

Chris Foster and I had gone ashore from the boat to call on Dr. Christopher Lambert and Don Fraser. Dr. Lambert was driving down to Fulford towing a trailer that contained Don's disc harrow, to be repaired at Fulford. I rode with them to post a letter, while Chris went farther along the shore.

* * *

And so we spun through the sweet countryside, past lakes and farms to the harbor, where there is a pleasant, drowsy village of three or four shops bound together by the road and the ferry dock.

There was a smell of dust and oil and wild roses. Nobody hurried. It was a country garage with a dirt floor. It used to be a smithy. Men stood around in comfortable attitudes. The welding job would take a little time. I wandered away to a store and waited to be served some groceries, but nobody appeared.

So I wandered further and talked to George Gervin in his cafe near the dock. George is one of the few Salt Spring islanders who know something about the salt springs. They are on private property at the north end of the island. One salt spring oozes weakly but spurts when there is an earthquake. The other spring bubbles up all the time.

"It's seven times as salt as the sea," said Mr. Gervin. "But there are other things in it besides salt. I have been carrying out some experiments with it, to find out whether it will do any good for skin diseases."

"Is it effective?"

"Oh, yes," said Mr. Gervin. He did not volunteer any more about its healing powers, but produced a large dusty bottle from under the counter. "That's water from the salt springs," he said. "I'll pour you a glass."

I wet my mouth with the clear water and spat it out. The liquid was bitter salt. The taste remained for hours.

* * *

Mrs. Gervin is a photographer, and something of an enthusiast for seafood. I noticed the sea urchin shells on the wall, and asked her whether she had ever eaten the contents.

She said that she had, and they tasted somewhat like shrimp. They looked like fish roe; but the edible part was buried in so much evil-looking mess that few people could stomach it.

"Is it true that the Indians eat them raw?" I asked. "I heard they are supposed to be intoxicating."

"Not that I've heard," she said. "You have to boil them." And then she told me how long they should be submerged in boiling water; but I can't remember now whether she said five minutes, or 15. I must find out for sure, on my next trip to Fulford, because I have made up my mind to sample some boiled sea urchin.

* * *

I made one more attempt to buy some groceries. The door was still open, and the proprietor was still absent. Then I heard Dr. Lambert calling from the road. Don's disc had been welded in remarkably short time, and we were ready to go.

We drove back along the dusty road to Dr. Lambert's seafront resort, passed a while wandering over Don Fraser's place, and rowed to the sloop. A fresh breeze filled the sails, and it came as a relief after two days of inching along in light airs and using the engine. We were on our way to Ganges.

For the Sake of Argument

Meet the Coddled Teenager

Frank Tumpane, Toronto Telegram columnist, radio panelist, is a well-known proponent of firm measures to bring teenagers under control. The following article appeared in the current issue of Maclean's Magazine.

By FRANK TUMPANE

About a year ago, I was invited to talk informally to a journalism class in a Toronto school. The reason for the invitation, I presumed, was that I have been a newspaperman for 23 years and would have something to tell the young ladies and gentlemen about journalism.

It took no more than [illegible] minutes from the time I walked through the door to realize that this had been a rash presumption. The kids weren't interested in learning what I knew. They were interested in showing off what they knew.

Now there are some opinions that interest me. But the opinions of eighteen and nineteen-year-old journalism students on what is wrong with newspapers and newspapermen are not included among thee—not on a busy afternoon. If I want to discuss journalism and what's wrong with it, I prefer to do this among my peers. And I have no trouble finding candidates for the discussion, either.

And so the meeting took on a tone that could only be described as testy, for although I may be afraid of all sorts of people, smart-aleck teen-agers are not among them.

These young whippersnappers were not interested in learning about my work as a columnist on a newspaper. They didn't attempt to find out from me some of the professional problems a columnist encounters. They weren't eager to know how a columnist gathers his material, how he puts it together or the style he tries to achieve. They weren't interested in any of those things. They were interested in attacking my point of view.

And you may say: "Oh, that's just the exuberance of youth," and my reply to that is: "I'm getting terribly tired of the exuberance of youth." And you may also say: "You were like that yourself when you were a teen-ager," and my reply to that is—let's be direct about it: "Applesauce!"

The reason I am able to be so forthright about that one particular thing is that I was in newspaper work myself when I was still a teenager. And I stood in considerable awe of my elders in the business. It's a good thing for me that I did. I learned a lot from them that way. When I was supposed to be listening, I was listening and when I hazarded an opinion it was as the result of being asked.

The difference between now and then, as near as I can tell, is that then a youngster who tried to force his adolescent opinions on his elders was considered a smart-aleck and squelched. And now he's considered a bit of a genius and the most commonly heard phrase in connection with him is, "There's a boy who'll go a long way." If I had my way, he'd go the long way home.

In the past ten years we have developed in this country (the United States led the way) a new breed of citizen. He is the Professional Teen-ager. The teenage years are no longer considered the training period for manhood and maturity. They have a special status of their own. Today's teenagers are cuddled, coddled and courted and their juvenile notions on love, life and the cosmos are eagerly sought and retailed by some of their raisin-brain elders.

What has caused this?

It seems to me it has been caused by four principal agencies: Modern Education, The Press, Radio and Television, and Modern Business.

He Has a Market Value

Among other things, Modern Education implanted in the teen-ager the notion that he was able to discipline himself, which would be perfectly laudable except that he isn't. And he is demonstrating all over the North American continent that he isn't.

The Press, Radio and Television and the department stores caught on to the fact that the teenager, because of his increasing dominance, had assumed a new and important Market Value. The Press has pandered to the professional teenager by running columns of puerile news and gossip to interest him and to inflame his already enlarged ego.

But that is by no means the worst the Press has done. The Press has tripped over its necktie in its collective effort to interview teenagers on subjects on which the teenager has no right to express opinions whatever.

"How much homework do you think you should have?" he'll be asked. Who cares what he thinks? His teacher, who spends several years of study preparing to answer that question, is the one who should be asked it.

And in recent years, across the country, we've been treated to the spectacle of school strikes, called at the insistence of some young cockalorums to right what they consider some academic wrong. And when this happens, instead of calling out the cops and forcing the restoration of order, the knucklehead school principal and the fatuous school board more often than not actually start to negotiate with the adolescent strikers.

It's the president of the Student Council—that self-governing body so ubiquitous in student life today—who usually gives the reporters his statement and tells how he's going to confer with the "kids" to see if "something can't be worked out."

In his capacity as Consumer, Connoisseur and Style-Setter, the Professional Teen-Ager of both sexes has been eagerly taken over by the marts of merchandise.

John and Mary get their pictures in the advertisements these days in their roles as "junior fashion consultants" or "teenage merchandising counsellors." They have no money of their own.

But that's all right. Mom and Pop will get it for them because Mom and Pop want them to have the best of everything whether the best is good for them or not.

It isn't fair to single out the high school principal for special censure in this matter. The modern high school principal is a man who knows his job but can't do it properly because his authority has been largely removed. He must keep one eye on his work and the other on his employers, the school board, composed of people who are sensitive to parental meddling to the point of hypochondria.

Sometimes, even today, a high school teacher, overcome by recklessness and eaten by fury, will be pushed too far. And when this happens he may clout 15-year-old Little Willie right on the ear or even drag him yowling out of the classroom by the collar.

Naturally, this is a blow to the New Freedom and an affront to the Professional Teenager. The teacher is lucky if he isn't charged with aggravated assault and is merely pilloried by the press and driven to another community.

For the notion that school is a place where adolescents are taught what they ought to know by people who know how to teach them in a way that experience has established is proper—and that discipline must be maintained while this is going on—this notion is symbolic of musty Victorian reaction.

And not only in the halls of learning has the New Dawn arrived for the Teenager.

Battalions of admen and caption writers are turned loose in the struggle for the teenage market. They concoct advertisements or columns of teen-age news in which they reproduce as faithfully as their stomachs will allow that particular brand of fractured English which the modern teenager is supposed to use. And they'll often come up with a felicity like this: Dig That Crazy Trumpet—That's Music, Man!

Frenzied Quartet Shouting

What is music? To many teenagers it's the inane caterwaulings of a Johnnie Ray or the frenzied shouts of these vocal quartets composed of young men who can take any good melody and twist it like a barroom pretzel.

The influence of these young musical fakers is completely unhealthy. They can draw squeals of ecstasy from the lungs and bosoms of the bobby-sox crowd with the combination of their weird noises, their exaggerated clothes and their twitching shoulders, jerking elbows and and bobbing foreheads.

Fan clubs are formed in their honor and the young lady who heads the local chapter is accorded the dizzy prestige of a personal interview with the quartet when they come to town on tour.

Often these idols are interviewed by the various media of communication and on these occasions they display all the articulateness of one of the more backward citizens of the Neolithic Age. Their conversation consists of a series of mumbles, interlarded with "like I say," "let's face it," "it's the greatest," "what I mean," and similar butcheries. They talk as if they were being operated by some incompetent ventriloquist who was continually forgetting to pull the string.

And don't tell me their influence isn't having an effect, either. Too many of our modern teenagers are incoherent, not because they are afflicted with adolescent shyness, but because they are losing contact with the English language. Even the progressives in education have today, of course, reached the point where they admit that something may have to be done to increase the modern child's facility with the language. But the progressives, as well, have gone a long way in some quarters toward conditioning us to accept the bad manners that accompany their cult of self-expression.

An enlightened lady in Winnipeg recently epitomized the modern approach toward adolescent boorishness. The conductor of the Winnipeg Symphony Orchestra, playing a concert for children, had to stop to warn, the audience to cease whistling and pelting the musicians with bobby pins.

And the lady, a member of the orchestra committee, remarked to the press in extenuation: "We've got to realize it's jus their way of expressing themselves."

This same vapid attitude is carried over into another area—the area of the handling of juvenile delinquency. A New York judge named Archie O. Dawson had some pertinent remarks to make about this attitude and the effect it is having. He started by saying that juvenile delinquency has made the streets of New York more dangerous than the jungles of Africa. And he attributed much of the increase in crime to what he called the "soft-hearted, soft-headed approach of those who would like to treat young adult criminals as children when they are no longer children."

A juvenile delinquent is a pretty important fellow these days—not only in New York but in Canada. As soon as he gets himself established as a genuine problem-case, he gets himself surrounded by a coterie of professional weepers and breast-beaters who will tell him: (a) society is at fault; (b) his elders are at fault and (c) he is misunderstood. There are variations on this theme but the theme is constant.

The growth of the juvenile delinquent in the past 20 years has had as a concomitant the growth of the professional bleeding-heart who does his (or her) woozy best to protect the young thug from the result of his actions. When organized young hooligans breach the peace, the bleeding-hearts want to investigate the causes of the disorder, instead of seeing first that order is restored.

Nor is it difficult to identify the modern young hooligan. He obligingly wears a uniform to make the process simple. He has what is known as a "duck's back" haircut—very waved and oily—and he is clad in a black leather windbreaker and a pair of jeans. The little doxies who are his female companions are also dressed in jeans.

The swift punch on the nose is disdained as an effeminate form of combat by these sleazy young characters. The new idea is to knock somebody down and then kick him in the face. Putting the boots to an opponent is now universal and accepted. Sometimes they go too far.

Sometimes they beat and kick innocent adults who run afoul of them. If the offence is flagrant, an aroused public is ready to have them handed a dose of their own medicine. The public would, in other words, like to see the police crack open a few of their heads.

But the bleeding-hearts, flapping and squawking and dabbing at their eyes, rush in to tell the poor misunderstood young thugs that what they need is a new community centre. And the young hoodlums agree that that is precisely what is required to make them abandon the neighborhood hamburg joint and mend their ways. Except that it doesn't.

As a matter of fact, a snivelling form of self-pity is one of the hallmarks of the modern young thug. It used to be that a young tough was a young tough and was treated like a young tough. But the modern young tough is a young tough who is encouraged to have a good cry about his condition.

He is urged to blame somebody else for his troubles. He is told he is the victim of police malice, bad housing, lack of recreational facilities or a hard-hearted society intent on forcing him to obey the law instead of probing his psyche. And often these young whippersnappers give out interviews to the press in which they recount to the panting public the ways in which they are persecuted, with promises of reformation if only they are treated with tolerance and understanding.

This pleases the bleeding-hearts but what the bleeding-hearts refuse to admit, of course, is that these young hoodlums have been nurtured on violence and violence is the only thing they respect. They can understand somebody's forcing them to obey the law. They only sneer at somebody's coaxing them to obey it.

Society has a duty to correct the conditions that breed juvenile delinquency—insofar as society is able to correct the conditions. But society has another duty, and that is the duty to see that the law—which is a communal form of protection—is not thrown into a state of chaos.

And society's first duty is to restore order when order is breached and restore it in the only way that those who breach it can understand. For the panaceas of the misty-eyed, the do-gooders and the hand-wringers are not working. Newspaper headlines all across the country every week of the year attest to the fact that they are not working. Even the public—the poor, dumb, long-suffering public—is at last catching on to the fact that they are not working.

And the public, it seems to me, is just about ready for a change.

Teenage Youths Get Unique Jail Term

GUNTERSVILLE, Ala. (UP)—Six teenagers will begin six months of sleeping in the city jail here June 1 in a new form of justice designed by Judge J. S. Stone.

The judge said he was alarmed because parents of the wayward youths did not know their whereabouts at nights. He sentenced the youngsters to spend all their nights in jail during probationary periods.

They will have to check in with the jailer at 7 p.m. and will be allowed to check out at 7 a.m.

The youths were guilty to breaking into several summer homes near here. Stone sentenced them to five years in prison, but granted them the probations.

"I'll know where they are now," Stone said. "It's an experiment. We'll see how it works."

Spanish Broom Germinates Well

By M. V. CHESNUT, FRHS

Spanish Broom — (M.W.W., Victoria). It isn't necessary to freeze the seeds of Spanish broom before sowing, nor do you have to chip or file a hole in the seeds. They germinate fairly rapidly without any special attention.

The ideal treatment for these seeds is to sow in rather sandy soil in a greenhouse or heated frame in February. At this time of the year, however, your best bet would be to sow them outdoors, potting up the plants in the late fall into three-inch pots and wintering them in a cold-frame. They could be planted out into their permanent position next spring.

Mexican Orange—(G.H., Victoria). The shoot and leaves you sent me for identification are from a shrub called Choisya ternata or Mexican orange, a most attractive subject with handsome foliage and a mass of white flowers carrying the real orange blossom scent, although the Choisya is only distantly related to the true orange.

It is of borderline hardiness here, and may kill to the ground in a bad winter unless given a sheltered position and really first class drainage. It isn't the least particular as to type of soil as long as the ground doesn't stay soggy wet through the winter.

Cuttings will root quite readily in sandy soil under the protection of a coldframe, and are best taken in July.

Leaf-Losing Peach Tree—(H.L.H., Saanich). The leaves which are falling from your peach tree are very much undersized, and the symptoms would indicate that the tree is not receiving some essential element of nutrition.

If the leaves near the base of the branch fall first, this suggests that the deficiency might be magnesium. I suggest that you try spraying with a solution of Epsom salts in water, one level tablespoonful per gallon, treating the tree every ten days until the leaf-falling is arrested. In the meantime, mulch around the roots heavily with rotted manure and see that it gets plenty of water.

Increasing Lithosperum— (J. M., Royal Oak). This lovely blue-flowered rock plant cannot be lifted and divided in the ordinary way, as it only has one root system, and the best way to get more plants, therefore, is by taking cuttings. These will root fairly readily if treated with a hormone rooting powder and inserted in a shady bed of sandy soil, covering each one with an up-ended jam jar until growth starts.

A good soil mixture for lithospermum is three parts of good garden loam, two parts sand, one part peat moss and one part leafmould. Don't give any lime, as some members of the family, particularly Heavenly Blue, have a violent distaste for it.

"People from all churches cordially invited"

THE VOICE OF ONE

By REV. DR. FRANK S. MORLEY

"Few, if any, have earned for themselves the right to disbelieve in Christianity," said Renan. Honest doubt is a delight to discover, but so much is dishonest doubt.

"The Know-Nothing Party" became a power in American politics with a platform of [illegible] spiritual descendants include many of the critics of the churches. They just don't know.

Take a man who called a church "a business men's club." What club does he belong to that does as much good in character-building, providing recreation, performing countless deeds of kindness, lifting the community by worship, and making God real?

"The Bible is merely a philosophy," a young man said. Yet one of the things not in the Bible is philosophy! "I don't believe in God," said another. "How did you reach that conclusion?" I asked. He didn't know. "I don't believe in the future life," said a woman. "Why?" No reason. "I am stymied by the conflict between religion and science," said another. "What conflict?" He couldn't tell me.

"Science has not demonstrated any fact or series of facts that is incompatible with Christianity," said Cecil F. Martin, brilliant professor of anatomy at McGill. "Materialistic philosophy leads to positions that cannot be maintained and asks us to believe in events that are simply incredible."

That stupendous scientist, Arthur Eddington, again and again argues, "We all know that there are regions of the human spirit untrammeled by the world of physics. In the mystic sense . . . in a yearning toward God, the soul grows upward and finds fulfillment of something planted in its nature."

Carl Miller, professor of physics at Brown university, maintains in "A Scientist's Approach to Religion": "We have far more reason for faith in the great Divine purpose than our forefathers could possibly have had." Professor J. Arthur Thomson reasons similarly: "It is easier for the religious mood to breathe in the world today."

Faith in the Future

Macneile Dixon, professor of English at Glasgow university, gives eloquent and magnificent argument for the religious point of view in "The Human Situation." These Gifford Lectures forbid religious themes, but Dixon demonstrates conclusively that good living here demands faith in the future life.

One of the most extraordinary writers of our time, C. S. Lewis, professor of English at Oxford, brilliantly upholds the Christian position. But the profound exponents of Christianity make an endless list.

Often opposition to the Christian faith comes from rationalization. A man wants to escape responsibility, or he is lazy and wants to sleep Sundays, or he wants the security of not thinking, or he does not want the evil in his life rebuked, so he says, "I don't believe all that stuff!"

Or a man says, "I can't accept what I don't understand." Yet he uses electricity in his home! Another says, "I'm too practical. Religion is too mystical." Like the frontiersman who refused to accept the fact that the earth was round, "Every place I've been was flat."

This person has found a cheat in the church. Must Christ be condemned because of Judas? Another looks at some eccentrics. Should Christianity be judged by its caricatures? Do you condemn doctors because of African Voodoo or "medicine men?"

Jesus bitterly condemned the closed mind. A certain justice of the peace is alleged to have listened to a few opening arguments and then have concluded his cases lest further evidence might confuse him. Many people have rigid conclusions because they have stopped thinking.

"Unless the spiritual problem is solved, civilization will fail," says Trueblood. For the sake of your children, for the sake of your community, for the sake of your soul, I beseech you to think!

Estes Attacks

From UP, AP, CP Dispatches

Sen. Estes Kefauver, taking a roundhouse personal swing at his rivel for the Democratic presidential nomination, declared in Florida last night that with Adlai Stevenson at the helm the Democrats wouldn't have a chance. "The party," he declared, "must have new leadership and a new program to win this year."

Gulf Islands Can't Cope With Sudden Tourist Boom

Daily Colonist reporter Chris Foster and columnist G. E. Mortimore are cruising the Gulf islands in Foster's 31-foot sloop, Vision, reporting what they see to Colonist readers. The first story, by Foster, tells of a booming tourist industry on the islands.

By CHRIS FOSTER

A new industry—tourism—is beginning to disturb the peace of the Gulf islands.

The reason is the introduction of government-subsidized ferry services.

Already holiday traffic to Salt Spring island is double that of last spring. Last Monday a record 231 cars and 689 passengers were carried on the Crofton-Vesuvius ferry George S. Pearson, which came into service Nov. 10.

When the 36-car ferry Motor Princess begins its run between Swartz bay and Fulford Harbor, scheduled for July 1, tourist traffic is expected to boom throughout the Gulf islands.

The Motor Princess will release the smaller ferry Cy Peck for full services to Galiano, Mayne, Pender and Saturna islands. The B.C. Power Commission is at present extending power to these islands.

Big need now is for more up-to-date resorts.

Colin Mouat, president of Salt Spring Chamber of Commerce, puts it this way: "We are in for a tourist boom—but at the moment we just haven't the places for them to stay.

A really modern tourist motel is opening at Vesuvius next week, but if they had 100 suites they would be able to fill them this summer.

"These islands have a beauty o. their own which can match California or anywhere else in the world."

Colin's uncle, Gavin Mouat, who runs the new Gulf Islands Ferry Co., said: "We have been fighting a long time for transportation, and now that we have it, the islands are really on the doorstep of rapid development.

"The government has acknowledged the need for highway links with Vancouver Island, and so has given stability to the islands.

"However, even with the Motor Princess, I doubt if we will be able to handle all the holiday traffic we shall get this summer.

"The Cy Peck is going to be too small for Galiano, Pender and the other islands before she starts. I say this, because I know how fast business is developing there."

The Mouat family settled on Salt Spring in 1885.

Red Jet Plane Steals Limelight

ZURICH, Switzerland (UP)—Russia's new TU-104 twin-jet civilian airliner stole the thunder from the latest American and British jet fighters Saturday at the international air show at Kloten airport.

Russians at the show were high in their praise for Britain's gleaming Hawker Hunter jet fighter. And they peered closely at the new U.S. air force F-100 supersabre, descendant of the planes that downed Russian-made MIGS in the Korean war.

But the crowds went for the Russian airliner which was first revealed to the West at London last month.

The onlookers even ignored a display of American guided missiles to gape at the gleaming silver plane which made a brief flight over the field. The Russians were kept busy passing out leaflets giving details of the plane and its capacity.

The Russians themselves seemed more interested in the Hawker Hunter Mark VI, never shown publicly before and reported to be one of the fastest jets in the world. The British kept it in an isolated hanger under guard.

"It is a very beautiful plane," commented M. N. Kostiuk, "crew organizer" of the TU-104 airliner. The Russians would not comment on the Supersabre.

Hero Linemen Are Hard To Find

BY WILLIAM MARSHALL
Special to The Colonist

VANCOUVER — You could call them the heroes of modern industrial expansion such as is now skyrocketing the Vancouver area.

Like all heroes—good linemen are hard to find.

The pace of construction of new power lines to meet the demands of enlarging industry and expanding frontiers has left the Vancouver district and B.C. generally critically short of experienced men to provide the sinews for power.

The present force of an estimated 500 experienced electrical power linemen in Vancouver is being augmented by imports from as far away as the Atlantic seaboard. First-class air transport is being provided for men from other parts of Canada who want to help this province light up.

Right now, in addition to all the day-by-day replacement and repair and maintenance jobs the linemen must get done, have been added such major chores as construction of a 32,000-volt Harrison lake transmission line, the Powell river-to-Squamish line and the start of a cable line from the mainland to Vancouver Island.

And just completed is a tough hillside scramble to reroute part of the Horseshoe Bay to Squamish line so the highway could come through, so the railroad could be built. (Rockfall from highway construction impeded the railroad so it had to be built first.)

The hero title was tragically earned along the way by the men responsible for seeing that the rest of us are provided with heat and light and TV and trolley buses.

Five men—four linemen and a helper have been killed and a fifth badly hurt in the dangerous business of getting the power through.

The wages of heroism: $2.44 an hour.

Vancouver's 300 Buddhists will be observing with the rest of the world's giant population an important mark in the history of their religion this year.

In the Buddhist temple at 500 Powell will begin, for Vancouver Buddhists, as for the rest of the Buddhist world the second half of the great religious leaders era.

On May 24 ended the first 2,500 years of Buddhism—halfway mark in the 5,000 years he forecast his religion would endure. At the end of the second 2,500 year period a great fire will consume the world, he prophesied.

Members of the church here are mostly Japanese although there are white members and a visiting teacher from Seattle is a white woman.

Observed April 8 at the Powell street church was the anniversary of the birthday of Buddha, founder of the world's largest church with a following of 400,000,000, approximately 40 per cent of the world's population.

Best friend of Vancouver—and Victoria—these days is a high pressure ridge that just doesn't seem to want to leave us.

The faithfulness of the ridge, the weatherman says, is what has enabled this area to ride literally on the crest of a wave of good weather.

As a matter of fact, the way the business works out, we are literally importing the weather from Hawaii—hope they don't suffer for it.

What happens when the pressure is high aloft, the weather reaches here from a little south of due west, just like a slight shift in the direction of waves on the water, so we get good weather.

More importantly as long as we are on the crest, any storms that come along are sapped of their strength and wind up as cloud patches instead of cloudbursts. Nice, eh?

Point is, according to the weatherman, we are only a hair's-breadth from the weather position we were in last year, when the high ridge was a few degrees west, which left this area in a slight trough, so we got our weather from north of the west-east direction and every storm "gave us a licking."

Start rockin' instead of knockin'."

That's the word from Guy Mitchell, a rock and roll expert who recently left Vancouver after showing a sample of the art here that seemed to please the women and children—never mind the men.

Mitchell was due to appear in Victoria, he said, but couldn't make it because of a date in Berkely, Calif., where he was due to rock and roll on behalf of a fund for a crippled children's hospital there.

The rock and roller said he was tired of listening to people knocking teenagers and describing rock and roll as some kind of a disease.

"The kids up here are real nice—and one of the things that makes them nice is the fact they are out in the open enjoying rock and roll music. You don't go into dark corners to enjoy that."

"You may not remember this, but it started way down in Basin street, took a detour through the hillbilly country and came out rock and roll. And there's nothing wrong with it. It's a kind of folk music. And the people that like it are real folks too."

Uniform Traffic Code

INTERMITTENTLY during the past eight or ten years attempts have been made to obtain agreement among the provinces regarding the establishment of a basic traffic code for Canada. Progress, however, remains disappointing even though there have been several inter-provincial conferences of traffic safety authorities. While there is now a close approach to uniformity in such items as the shape and color of road signs, enough differences remain in other provincial regulations and local by-laws to make driving confusing for those travelling in unfamiliar places.

In these days of increasing inter-provincial travel regulations of one province which conflict with those of another are bad enough, but the situation becomes even more perplexing when there is absence of uniformity among the municipalities of one metropolitan area. A fundamental guide, in respect of which there should be uniformity throughout the country, is the "white line" indicating when it is permissible to pass and when it is not. How is any driver, especially a stranger, to know what is expected of him when different systems of marking are used in adjacent municipalities, as is the case with Victoria and Oak Bay.

Ignorance of the law is no excuse, but it is manifestly impossible for a motorist to familiarize himself with the differing traffic rules of all the municipalities he may pass through in a journey of only a hundred miles or so. Police officers may or may not be tolerant with erring strangers, but matters can go hard with a driver who becomes involved in an accident through doing something which was permissible in a municipality a few miles back but illegal where he had the misfortune to be when the mishap occurred. While some special rules may be necessary to meet special conditions, surely uniformity in all the basic essentials could be achieved across Canada if the authorities really put their minds to it.

An Intriguing Thought

AN interesting sidelight on the parliamentary pipeline battle, although it could be a focal point and not just a by-product, is raised by an eastern press gallery correspondent. This is the position of the Senate. If they wanted to, Senators could throw a monkey-wrench into all the government's ruthlessly applied plans for immediate passage of the pipeline legislation. People don't often remember that the Red Chamber is part of Parliament but it is, and all Commons bills must secure its assent. Since the Liberals have about a ten-to-one majority in the Senate acquiescence is taken for granted, but conceivably the opposite could happen.

Even some Liberal senators don't like the popular assumption that the Red Chamber is a rubber-stamp refuge for party stalwarts grown old for active politics. They have the BNA act to support them. Ostensibly at least the Senate is the half of Parliament which takes a second look at all legislation, usually in a calmer frame of mind than the Commons induces. Certainly it has the power to make itself felt when senators feel the urge to do so. Admittedly this is not often, but there are instances where amendments have been made even to money bills like the pipeline measure, which were accepted by the Commons. Such procedures take time, which is the crux of the whole situation.

The government loan must go through within the next few weeks or Trans-Canada authority to construct the line will be withdrawn. Were the Senate to debate the subject at any length—and no closure rules exist there—the time limit would expire. Even in a passive role therefore the Senate has a significant voice to utter. One does not expect it to contravene the government's wishes but there is a certain piquancy in the possibility. The very thought of such a happening is enough to cause even Mr. Howe to blanch. And what an anti-climax it would provide to the government's steam roller!

The Bomb Is a Hard Fact

THE detonation of an airborne hydrogen bomb over a Pacific atoll last week in United States tests has demonstrated to the world that this virtually unbounded means of destruction is available in portable form. Hydrogen masses have been fused on the ground before by means of uranium fission as the heating agent, but the conjunction of both in a missile that is conveyable and self-contained had not been publicly demonstrated up to that time by any nation, in so far as there is established record. The hard fact of the proved existence of the "hydrogen bomb," as distinct from merely arranged fissionable materials on the ground, for good or ill is the net addition to the world's knowledge on the subject.

Profoundly disturbing as such tremendous force in human hands is, it may prove to be one of the most persuasive factors in deterring any resumption of major aggression on the face of the earth. Not willingly will mankind decimate or destroy itself. From all that has been learned, well-night universal destruction would be the first and very final result of any world conflict beginning on such unleashed terms. It is strange to think that peace in a realizable form may one day come to all nations by virtue of the fact that man has found a weapon too big to employ, a stick too big to lift. It would have been infinitely preferable if war could be exorcised because it is in fact the solution of nothing. If this achievement through reason is beyond the range of the times, universal fear may yet reach the same goal.

Power for More Industry

When B.C. Power Commission began its operations 10 years ago it embarked upon a development at Campbell River which would provide 16 times the amount of power for which it had customers. Courage? Perhaps foresight would be a better word.

B.C.'s growth has left the original plans far behind. V.I. has shared in the general provincial post-war development. The John Hart Hydro Development, a memorial to past governmental planning, cares only for the needs of V.I. There is nothing to spare for any other region.

In fact, the growth story, as all know, has been such on V.I. that power is to be brought in to meet the demand . . . What better index of industrial growth on V.I. could there be?

Entitled to Protection

Down in Oak Bay, many residents and boating enthusiasts are of the opinion that it is high time some definite action was taken by authorities to curb the activities of those who endanger the lives of others by dashing in and out of harbors and alongside beaches in speedboats.

Oak Bay is not the only seafront area where that type of exhibitionism is prevalent. It plagued swimmers and persons in small boats in English bay, at Kitsilano beach and other beaches around Vancouver until civic authorities instructed their lifeguards to keep speedboats out in the open water, where they belong.

It has been evident right here on our own beachfronts on many occasions, and luck alone has prevented accidents which might have proved serious. There is plenty of room in the wide open spaces of Georgia strait for speedboat racing; let's confine it to that area.

A Matter of Health

Much as we would like to see a proper sewerage disposal system built here, we realize that the cost would be high and quite beyond our reach considering the interest which the city would have to pay. Half a million dollars wouldn't take us very far.

But it might be within reach if low interest loans were provided by the Dominion government. We feel that a government which is concerning itself with a national health scheme would surely show interest in a plan which would provide one of the foundations upon which good health standards are built.

Lawn Bowling

At this time of year when the evenings are long and pleasant the newcomer to Ladysmith finds the picture startlingly incomplete—there is no lawn bowling. In most communities on the prairies and in eastern Canada summer and lawn bowling are practically synonymous.

Perhaps because the fishing is good in the lawn bowling season, Ladysmith has never felt a need for this gracious summer sport, but it has much to recommend it nevertheless. For one thing it is a participant's game and that is important in an age when middle-age spread is acquired by shifting from the TV chair to the bench in the ball park.

Sewer By-law

The commissioners have prepared the sewer by-law as a solution to the very real problem of sewage disposal in Campbell River. Septic tanks are certainly not the answer since it is a well-known fact that the number of new houses (and septic tanks) in the town during the past few years has created a health menace none of us can afford to ignore.

Galiano School Problem

If the school board is convinced that Galiano has reached its peak of development and that further facilities on that island are unlikely to be required in the future, then the closing of the superior school is an obvious move. If, however, Galiano is destined to expand its economy, in the view of the trustees, there would appear little reason why the present facilities should not be maintained, even at a higher cost to ratepayers.

The alternative proposals would undoubtedly occasion greater costs if they should be implemented. Better that such costs be centralized in the maintenance of a school, in despite of any factor discouraging the continued service.

Thinking Aloud

". . . of shoes—and ships—and sealing wax—of cabbages and kings."

By TOM TAYLOR

YOU would think that nowadays, even if they didn't teach geography in the schools—which I presume they do—the location of places would come easily to people. Just by reading newspapers alone you can become an expert.

Never before the last two decades, I'm sure, did so many people become so acquainted with the names of so many places. We absorb geography with the same facility we pack our minds with quizz-question knowledge.

Except, perhaps, the bureaucrats, who may disdain such mundane matters. Certainly at least there are times when it seems that Ottawa officials can't see over the Rocky Mountains, or, having managed this feat, don't see very clearly.

Mr. George Warren probably could supply numerous cases in point.

Apropos of which I am reminded of the wartime order from defence headquarters which suggested that certain military trucks could be used in the morning in the Vancouver area and in the afternoon in the Victoria area.

* * *

If Victorians worried much about this sort of thing they would be in a constant stew, since scarcely a week passes without some geographical faux pas belittling this community.

Not that all the misplacements are unhappy. Not long ago a Vancouver paper ran a picture of the Peace Tower at Ottawa and credited it as a Victoria amenity. Some ire was aroused here although I never saw why. Without prejudice to our own ornate James Bay buildings the transfer of Parliament Hill from Ottawa to Victoria was a compliment.

But if we object to other towns stealing our thunder we can't very well claim what doesn't belong to us either, so probably it was strictly proper to be annoyed.

The Ottawa Journal, I see, is somewhat wroth too these days, and with the national defence department, which of course is right at its own front, or back door.

The department can't see Ottawa, it seems, for gazing at the Pacific Coast.

Whether this proves that you see a wood better when no trees get in your way or indicates that geography has become compulsory among government departments doesn't matter. It has a welcome sound.

* * *

The point at issue however is that Ottawa is being neglected, so the Journal says, in the matter of military spectacle. It never sees a regular army unit on parade, staging a pageant or putting on a drill display.

And Ottawa, remember, is the capital of Canada. Obviously this is a heinous omission.

The result is that all those hard-working legislators on Parliament Hill don't get a chance to see the regiments they underwrite in the defence budget. Offhand one might say that with such things as pipeline debates they couldn't get time off anyway, but that is probably an improper aside.

Specifically the complaint concerns the promotion of a searchlight tattoo in Vancouver, with army troops re-enacting Bonnie Prince Charlie and other intriguing happenings of history. Frankly I don't know how Prince Charlie got into the picture since he never knew the geography of either Vancouver or Ottawa, but there it is.

Ottawans are jealous, and with their own service chiefs.

Some sympathy must go to that gracious overlooked city, but I am glad the Ottawa Journal apparently doesn't know about the feu de joies that ripple regularly from regular army rifles to the great delight of Victorians.

Somebody might want to take our Queen's Own and station them in Confederation Square. Better in this case to lie doggo, even at the expense of geography.

The Church in a Material World

By RICHARD L. THOMAS, Daily Colonist Correspondent

RELIGION in the modern world is an ever-recurring subject of debate. At least this indicates that people think about it. We have the critics who accuse the church of being out of step with modern thought, and the critics who tell us that modern thinkers are out of step with the church. Then of course we get down to such questions as what we mean by the church, what we ought to pay our ministers and whether we should have paid ministers at all.

We have people who tell us that the Archbishop of Canterbury should not receive a stipend of $20,000 a year and others who regard the $1,000 a year paid as a minimum to Congregational ministers as adequate. We have those who tell us that the church is useless and others who tell us that we will never have a militant church until we pay proper wages.

The Rev. Elsie Chamberlain, the first woman minister to be chairman of the Congregational Union of England and Wales, has been attacking some of the complacency and has appealed for a new attitude towards the ministry. She pointed out to many obviously successful business men at the annual assembly that many ministers were surviving on $21 a week and she did not know how they did it. She criticized hard-headed business men who kept ministerial salaries low and sacrificed ministers on the altar of their own particular likes and dislikes.

She referred, too, to the dark shadows of unused churches during the week and suggested that many ministers might more usefully preach from the steps of their churches on week-days than to a handful of people inside the church on Sundays.

* * *

It is not of course just a problem of Congregationalism. It is the problem of organized religion all over the country.

It is also a paradox. Whilst so many churches are empty there are plenty of manifestations of spiritual hunger. "Stunt" religions flourish and usually die; the traditional faiths of the people as represented by organized religion tend to become confused by materialism. It is true that one may rarely enter a church in town or country without hearing an appeal for money; it is true that rarely a day goes by without some item or comment in a newspaper about clergy stipends.

Sincere people argue that they have enough financial worry of their own without hearing about the church's troubles every time they go to church; sincere clergy maintain that the church will grow weaker unless better salaries are paid to attract the right men.

There is always someone to reply that the right men to do God's work are not encouraged by high salaries—indeed that is the very thing to encourage the wrong sort. Make it an attractive job and the church will be rushed by the wrong people. There may be some merit in this argument because we have seen the effects of ever-rising salaries in the teaching profession. Those who regarded teaching as a vocation are gradually being swamped by those who think it is a good job with three months' paid holidays a year.

Churches, of course, will argue that the church is made in the image of man to serve God; that it is part spiritual and part material and that you cannot have one without the other. The fabric fund, the organ fund, the repair fund are all part of the material needs of the church necessary for it to carry on its spiritual work. If man wants that spiritual work he must contribute materially. Stipends are a matter of conscience. Most church leaders feel that they must be high enough to attract intelligent clergy but not high enough merely to interest people who want a good job. Somewhere there must be a compromise.

There are growing arguments about the fitness of clergy in the modern world — whether the conventional academically-trained minister is adequate in a world of factories and commerce of which he knows nothing. There is the argument that ministers and people are too often poles apart; he with his background of scholarship and they with a background of manual toil in fields or at factory bench. In many cases the gap is bridged by the humanity of the minister and the spiritual hunger of the worker, but too often it remains unbridged and the church is inferentially the home of alien scholarship and the parish the home of alien materialism.

* * *

So far no church in England has really tackled this problem.

The Salvation Army has made its own approach and reached tens of thousands of people who otherwise would have been untouched. The Church Army has applied a similar technique on behalf of the Church of England. There are missions and patent religions but no church seems to have reached out to cover all, though individual churches have succeeded where others have failed.

Suggestions have been put forward that the church should recruit laymen as deacons or curates with emphasis on their knowledge of the modern world and their love of humanity rather than for scholastic ability or theological training. Some call it a plea for fundamentalism—that Christians will be won by example and the realization that Christianity is a life to be lived rather than a theology to be learned and preached. The scholars put on a wry smile. An army needs discipline, they say. No army could survive on a basis of brotherly love alone, and theology is the disciplinary code of the church and only scholars are competent to interpret it.

The fundamentalists reply that Christ was a carpenter; that his disciples included representatives of every walk of life.

Somewhere there is an answer and it needs to be found because at the moment pagan materialism and spiritual hunger seem to be courting each other and organized religion does not seem to know the answer. But it will have to be found.

The Packsack

Of GREGORY CLARK

A NEW trend in medical advice is appearing in the doctors' attitude toward summer resorts.

"Summer resorts," said one physician to a friend of mine who has a mild cardiac condition, "are too hard to get at now. Every year it is a tougher job to reach any of the familiar summer colonies. When our Canadian summer resorts were first established, trains and boats were the only means of reaching them. Today, it is literally a furious experience to get there."

The doctor frankly advised my friend to sell his summer home at a fashionable resort, which he and his forebears have owned for over 50 years, and with the proceeds go out and cruise around the countryside within 30 or 40 miles of the city, looking for a good hack road and an old-fashioned farm with woodlots on it, a stream, maybe a pond, or even a bit of swamp.

"A nice, quiet, hilly country," suggested the doctor, "with the nearest main highway at least five miles distant."

And there, he advised, at the back of such a farm, buy two or three acres. On it build a pleasant little cabin, a ranch style one, if he must. And with the money to be had from the sale of a summer cottage at a fashionable resort—which is plenty!—he can have a swimming pool and white fences, gardens, lawns, trees. But all within 30 or 40 miles of the city, with as little of the distance on highways as possible.

There, even in winter but certainly in spring, summer and fall, will be a country house. And it will afford, assures the doctor, all the peace and rest and escape that the founders of our summer colonies had in mind, 50 or 60 years ago, before there were cars, highways, engines, speed boats, and all the hustle and bustle that has taken possession of our summer colonies today.

"Actually," said the doctor, "you can get more peace 20 miles from a city than you can 200." Because it is the mileage now that is the stress and strain.

"This wouldn't work," said my friend, "if you had children."

"No," replied the doctor, "leave the resorts to the children and the strenuous young."

VICTORIA celebrated May 24 under grey skies, 50 years ago.

"The horse and automobile parade, which has become as distinct a feature as the time-honored regatta at the Gorge, began the celebration. The lacrossists attracted many to Oak Bay; and the men with the guns assembled for the shoot at Clover Point.

"The afternoon was given over to the regatta, and every available street car was on the Gorge line. Tally-ho, express, cart, hack, buggy, automobile, bicycle and other vehicles were also brought to reinforce the altogether too inadequate accommodation to Gorge travellers . . .

"There was also baseball . . . and in the evening thousands attended the fireworks display and illuminated automobile parade at Beacon Hill Park."

Letters to the Editor

'The Harm Gambling Can Do Is Well Known'

I would like to answer the letter of Mrs. Eva Bram re bingo. She asks just what is the objection?

The objection is that the United Church members cannot see what the difference is between these bingo and other lotteries that are not allowed. I grant the money goes to charity, but we ask, does this method of helping those less fortunate help or impede more sensible legislation to take care of the needy?

The press did not print the whole text of the resolution, unfortunately. I was a delegate at the conference and the resolution I was given a copy of, asked only that the matter be looked into before it got out of hand. I'm sure if our opponents really thought this thing through they would agree there is room for discussion, serious discussion.

The Grand National Sweepstakes is also run for charity, but statistics show that only 20 per cent actually reaches that goal.

The harm that gambling can do is well known. The teachings of Christ forbid it. The question is where, and if, you can draw a line. Perhaps we can. The United Church merely asks for the freedom to discuss it before we have it forced on us wholesale. This thing could become a veritable forest fire; the forces now hoping to bring legislation to help the aged hampered.

What are the churches doing to help charity? Only what the people who come to church can do. Those who don't have no knowledge of what we do; we do a lot more than you read about in the papers. We do not approve of "sounding trumpets" in this respect.

Yes, this is a free country, thank God. Let's keep it free, and not let it become a slave to vice and improper methods of dealing with a problem that is everyone's to share.

(Mrs.) MARGARET DIXON.

Hold This Wealth

Without singling out one of the three recent top-rating Mozart chamber music concerts given by members of the Victoria Symphony Society, it would be an understatement to say that any and every empty seat in the Victoria High school represented the loss of an outstanding rich experience — an experience that one hopes will again be afforded us next year.

Words are all too inadequate to explain music or its vast and varying effects upon the listener — all of this a healing and revitalizing contribution. However, if all the artistic delights one has known in hearing, seeing and feeling could be assessed, then perhaps that would half explain the thrill of these concerts, which featured prominent solo artists living in our midst, and already marching towards fame.

The rapport existing between players and audience was well-nigh perfect. To keep this significant cultural wealth in Victoria every citizen should petition if necessary for a civic grant to make it possible.

Many of us have toiled happily for years and will continue so to do in this rewarding work, but the effect of some dependable, tangible help, however small, which would result in profit rather than deprivation, and add to the too-often forgotten values in life, would result also in immeasurable inspiration to those who steadily carry on without this recognition, many of them being members of the orchestra who thus continue to proclaim their faith that "good will be the final goal—"; "that nothing walks with aimless feet—"; that naught "is cast as rubbish to the void," while music makes this world complete. Let us know Victoria's encouragement.

Alaska Panhandle

One reads with apprehension the suggestion by Premier Bennett that a "deal" be affected between Canada and the U.S. for Canadian hydro power — in exchange for access to sea in our fast-growing, wealthy north.

Alaska was purchased by the U.S. from Russia in 1867. One event of interest resulting from this was the Alaska-Canadian boundary dispute "settled" in 1903 by a tribunal of American, Canadian and British jurists.

This so-called settlement was bitterly opposed by the Canadian representative. Canada, weak, sparsely settled and just having taken the first steps toward self-governing nationhood, was at the time bulldozed and intimidated (recall the American slogan "54-40 or Fight.")

It is high time that Canada's legal department looked into this infamous land-grab by the U.S. Perhaps our member, General Pearkes, could start the ball rolling with a view to restoring the Panhandle to its rightful owner, Canada.

Home Tax Plan

On the front page of the second section of this morning's edition (May 26) you have an insertion under the heading of "Greatest Forward Step" in which the last paragraph reads as follows: "Under the plan, he (Premier Bennett) said, fair treatment to everyone was assured." As a resident of Victoria who unfortunately does not own a home and consequently has to pay rent, I should like to ask in which way "fair" treatment for everyone is assured"?

There are many, many people like myself who will not benefit one iota although in many cases we need the help more so than people who are fortunate enough to own their home. Also, how will this help the large number of people living in apartments and boarding? I don't wish to be critical or to carp, but cannot see that the plan will be of any help to myself and many others.

Consequently, it cannot be said that people who cannot afford to buy a house and also those who live in apartments will be receiving fair treatment. It is just the reverse. We have to pay rent and obtain no assistance, although we are just as much citizens of B.C. as the house owners.

U.S. Annihilation by Reds Possible by 1959—Lemay

WASHINGTON (AP) — Gen. Curtis Lemay estimates that by 1959 Russia will have enough long-range bombers and nuclear weapons to destroy the United States—if Soviet airmen should get every [illegible] attack.

This reluctant "guess" by the commander of the strategic air command was made public Saturday by the special Senate subcommittee investigating relative U. S.-Soviet airpower.

Lemay's opinion, based on jet bomber programs of the United States and intelligence estimates of the Soviet Union, was produced in a series of questions by Senator Stuart Symington (Dem. Mo.) chairman of the air power inquiry.

The general said that if information supplied by the central intelligence agency is correct, Russia will have nearly twice as many long-range jet bombers as the U.S. by 1960 "so the advantage will be with the Russians."

HEAVY DAMAGE LIKELY

Lemay said he could not guess what Kremlin leaders will do then but added:

"From 1958, he is stronger in long-range airpower than we are, and it naturally follows that if he is stronger, he may feel that he should attack."

Symington broke in to say that if the Russians got all the breaks "in a sudden surprise attack, wisely handled by their air commanders, it might be possible for them to destroy the United States now (from 1958 on); is that correct?"

"Yes," Lemay replied. "If everything went in his favor and we made all the mistakes posible to make, and we were caught completely by surprise on the ground—I might add I don't think this is possible to happen—but if it happen, we only have thirty-some bases, and I think that they could all be hit; and in that case we would have practically nothing left to do any retaliating with."

If Russia should try a surprise attack today, Lemay said, enough of his SAC bombers would survive to carry out terrible retaliation.

But he added that under a surprise attack "we would suffer very great damage."

Visit of U.S. Service Chiefs To Russia Up to Eisenhower

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States probably will suggest to Russia this week that its invitation for a few air force officers to visit Moscow be broadened to include top leaders of other services.

President Eisenhower will make the final decision, probably on a recommendation from the joint chiefs of staff that the Soviet invitation be accepted subject to certain conditions which in effect would change its nature substantially.

Eisenhower's own attitude toward an exchange of officials between the United States and the Soviet Union was described by informed officials as positive. The administration appears at the moment to be prepared for an open-ended series of official visits which could lead eventually to an invitation to Soviet Communist party boss Nikita Khrushchev and Premier Nikolai Bulganin to come here. This is not a specific purpose of American diplomacy now but some officials concede it could work out that way.

Eisenhower has given his personal attention to the Soviet invitation to the air force ever since Admiral Arthur W. Radford, chairman of the joint chiefs of staff, and his associates decided early last week that it could lead to an important visit or series of visits in the interest of the United States.

The Soviet invitation was informally presented to the air force last Monday by Col. Philip Bachinsky, air attache at the direction of Marshal Vasily D. Sokolosky, Soviet armed forces chief.

Clowhom Station

$4,000,000 Job

VANCOUVER (CP) — A $4,000,000 project to rebuild the Clowhom generating station, 40 miles northeast of Vancouver, was announced Friday by Tom Ingledow, B.C. Electric vice-president and executive engineer.

Work will begin in June to expand the station's capacity 10 times to 40,000 horsepower.

The completed station, which will be fully automatic, is scheduled to start operating 15 months later.

The present capacity of the plant, built by the B.C. Power Commission, is entirely absorbed by homes and stores in the nearby Sechelt area, which receive power over a 60,000-volt circuit.

LOIS MARSHALL

Toronto Soprano London Success

LONDON (CP) — Lois Marshall, 31-year-old Toronto soprano, Saturday night made a triumphant London debut at the Royal Festival Hall. She got two curtain calls each time she sang.

Accompanied by the Royal Philharmonic orchestra under the direction of 77-year-old Sir Thomas Beecham, the Canadian artist was given a warm ovation for her singing of the "exultate Jubilate," an extremely difficult work which Mozart wrote at the age of 17 for a male soprano.

The standing-room-only audience insisted on an encore, and Miss Marshall responded with "Constanza," from Mozart's "Il Seraglio."

FOUR CALLS

The two performances drew four curtain calls and a profusion of red and white flowers was presented to the singer.

One London critic said Miss Marshall showed herself to be the possessor of a "very beautiful voice indeed. She has everything."

In New York, Sir Thomas Beecham heard enthusiastic reports of Lois Marshall and wired her to audition for him. He was so impressed he not only chose her for the Queen of Sheba but asked her to sing a difficult role calling for a coloratura of lyric quality . . . a rare combination. Lois Marshall, with her passion and technical brilliance, filled the bill. She has a range of three octaves . . . from the F below middle C to the F above high C.

Weldon Kilburn, her teacher and accompanist, says when the 13-year-old Lois first came to him her voice was high like a bird's. He adds: "When the deep notes came, it was like striking oil."

HARD WORK

Partly because of her hard work and partly because Kilburn let her sing nothing but scales and exercises for two years, Miss Marshall is equally at home on low and high note.

When she made her New York debut at the Town Hall, the critic of the New York Herald-Tribune wrote: "She is one of the most superb singers this reviewer has ever heard. There is simply nothing she cannot do with ease, with insight and with the eloquence of the great artists."

That was in 1952. Lois was 27. In the years before that she had made her name on the Canadian concert circuit, touring the country several times and recording with the Toronto symphony orchestra under Sir Ernest Macmillan.

STILL LIMPS

An opera career was closed to her because she still limps from the polio she contracted as a child. That was one reason her New York success was delayed. Agents and talent scouts had heard her in Toronto but they were afraid her limp would distract concert-goers.

After her New York triumph, Columbia Artists signed her and its honorary president Arthur Judson took her career under his own supervision.

Play Just Funny

By BERT BINNY

It was a funny play. That was all.

It was "The Tender Trap," the Victoria Theatre Guild's final major production for the 1955-56 season, which opened last night at the Langham Court Theatre before a full house.

The Shulman-Smith opus itself is just as shallow as "The Gioconda Smile" was deep, with the reservation that there are interludes in the former which are something more than merely brittle.

But one felt that with one or two exceptions the characters were just ephemeral whimsies from a souped-up dream. One could like any of them but there were few that merited belief.

Right away a pervading atmosphere of brash humor was effectively established. Unfortunately, due in part to mechanical difficulties and in part to insensitive direction, this atmosphere was allowed to spill over into the more sober passages and thus rob them of their power and the play of its contrasts.

EVENING OF LAUGHS

For an evening of laughs there is everything to recommend "The Tender Trap." Considerable revision is required to raise it above that level.

Don Ross as Joe McCall was consistently excellent. So was Russell Gurney as Earle Lindquist.

The four girls, Norma Greig, Marjorie Gilbart, Margaret Dewdney and Madonna McCabe, appeared to have set their respective caps for one man (Cliff Clarke). In the whole bevy there was not one with the virtue of apple-cheeked simplicity; they were all terribly sophisticated, crafty as a skulk of foxes and much given to bearing down on a side wind.

They all played mighty well but such of them as were expected to display the occasional human trait or even emotion were not too successful. And there was a synthetic southern accent that might easily occasion a further war between south and north.

It is notable, too, that the play is written in American, a language somewhat rooted in English but now bearing little or no resemblance to it. For better or for worse this lent authenticity to the performance most of the way.

Screen's Dancing Queen

CYD CHARISSE

Cyd Comes Down To Males' Level

By SHEILAH GRAHAM

HOLLYWOOD (NAN) — Cyd Charisse isn't the tallest girl in Hollywood; in fact, she's only five feet six inches in height. But she has a problem—most of the movietown male dancers are short in stature.

"It's no secret," Cyd told me, "that, when I dance with Gene Kelly and Fred Astaire, I have to wear flat heels. It was wonderful in 'Meet Me in Las Vegas' to dance with Dan Dailey. Dan is six feet four and I could put on four-inch heels with him and feel like a little girl."

Astaire is actually three and a half inches taller than the statuesque-looking Cyd. "But he doesn't look taller because he's so slim. Gene is about five nine, but when I'm on my points it makes a difference. Donald O'Connor is shorter than Gene. I've danced with Ricardo Montalban and he's six feet, but he isn't really a dancer.

"We found two boys in Las Vegas who are tall but had never soloed before 'Meet Me in Las Vegas' and it was just wonderful to dance with them. It isn't only Hollywood dancers who are short. The big boys of ballet are usually in the shrimp class.

"And," continued the brunette beauty, "we're so expendable! As Ann Miller once told me, 'If we break a leg, we're like horses—they shoot us!'"

"I've been married to Tony (Martin) eight years May 15," Cyd told me. "We have two boys — little Tony, who has a good ear for music, and Nicky, 13, my son by a former marriage." (to Nico Charisse, who teaches ballet dancing). "I met Nico when I was 12 and enrolled in his classes. I started dancing when I was six. No one else in my family was in show business. My father's a jeweler."

"I started dancing because I was undernourished and needed the exercise," the star continued. "I'm still underweight and I have to mix my milk with cream. I always lose weight when I'm in a picture. In one week during 'Sombrero' I lost 10 pounds. While I was making 'Fiesta' in Mexico, I got amoebic dysentery. Took me years to get over it."

"How do you and Tony manage with your careers and marriage?" I wanted to know.

"We're apart about five months every year," Cyd explained, "but we haven't had any problems. He has never wanted me to give up my career."

How long will Cyd continue to pirouette across the screen? "You can go on until you're 50 if you keep in practice — Markova and Danilova have been dancing for a long time. I don't want to go on quite that long. It's their whole life, but I have other things — my marriage and my children."

The Viewing World — By John Crosby

TV Takes U.S. 'Culture' From Siam to Brazil

American television is infiltrating to the far corners of the earth just as American movies have. The Siamese now have the blessings of Rin Tin Tin. The South Americans have the escapades of Corliss Archer. The Australians will shortly — television hasn't quite got way Down Under yet — get their notions of American matrimony from "I Love Lucy."

For good or ill, American movies are a spout from dozens of TV stations the world over — and heaven knows where it will all end. For instance, Corliss Archer has got to be a great favorite in Latin America. And what will that do to their teen-agers?

In Latin America, no teen age girl would be permitted anything like the freedom Corliss enjoys. Their teenagers are chaperoned carefully until marriage. What happens when their teens discover Corliss can go bucketing around the countryside with any number of boy friends?

A social revolution? Ziv, which markets Corliss, rather hopes not. They don't want to be held responsible.

* * *

Ziv is now selling tons of American programs in foreign markets, ranging from Monaco to the Dominican Republic. They now have shows in every Central and South American country which has television.

They are programming over 860 half hours of American programs which have been dubbed into Spanish. "Cisco Kid" and "Highway Patrol," neither of which have been exactly confused with great art, are two favorites all over Latin America.

From these two, Latin Americans could easily get the idea that Americans' two favorite occupations were killing one another in automobiles or chasing one another around the wide open spaces on horseback.

Toward the end of this year, Australian television will get under way in Sydney and Melbourne. There will be two commercial TV stations and one government TV station in each city and all six will go on the air at once. Colin Bednall, general manager of one of the commercial stations, has just passed through town shopping for American TV programs.

* * *

He came rather late to the feast. His commercial opposition and the government station both rushed to America and furiously competed for American programs. Bednall decided to take his time, to wait until they'd spent all their money and he'd be the only Australian here with money to spend.

"What would you do if your opposition had bought 'Lucy' and 'Disneyland'?" he wanted to know. I told him that, if he found the answer to that one, to let the competing networks here in on the secret. They haven't found the answer yet.

Successful American shows are sure to be a hit in Australia, Bednall thinks. He bases this on their experience in radio and newspapers. Ninety-nine out of a hundred successful American newspaper features and radio programs also appeal to Australians. The British don't do nearly so well in these fields in Australia as we do.

So Australian children will be watching American cowboys from infancy up. Bednall doubts that there will be any outcry from Australian parents. "In Australia, it's accepted, even by do-gooders, that a child may suffer from another child's anguish, or a ghost at bedtime — but one cowboy shooting another is nothing."

* * *

Ziv is now selling programs in the Philippines, Germany, Italy, France, Luxembourg, England and Switzerland — dubbed variously in Spanish, French, Italian and German (with Portuguese coming up.)

Among the programs in these countries are "I Led Three Lives," "Favorite Story," "A Man Called X," "Science Fiction Theatre," "Mr. District Attorney," "Boston Blackie" and "The Unexpected," none of them exactly cultural programs.

TV Preview

Rollicking Broadway Musical Features Bloomer Brigade

By ROY PARRETT

A rollicking musical, inspired by the life story of the original Dolly Bloomer, crusader for women's rights, is "Bloomer Girl," Monday night spectacular on channel 4.

The 90-minute program of song and dance will be seen in compatible color at 5 p.m.

All resemblance to reality ends with the title of Monday's show. The program takes right off into flights of fanciful song and dance which made "Bloomer Girl" an immediate hit on Broadway.

Romantic leads in TV's "Bloomer Girl" are played by Barbara Cook and Keith Andes. Clever costumes and choreography reflect, of course, the title of the show.

* * *

"Glamor Girl" is the title of a new channel 5 show which each day performs an amazing 24-hour beauty transformation of special interest to the ladies.

Flashback clips on the program show how the pre-selected contestants looked before undergoing the glamor treatment. The woman is then unveiled on the show with her "new look."

The beauty tips are given on channel 5, Monday to Friday, at 3.30.

* * *

"In the Common Interest," is a new series of United Nations films which makes its debut on channel 2 on Monday night. The programs survey the technical assistance rendered by the United Nations toward raising living standards throughout the world.

The first of the weekly presentations, to be seen tomorrow night at 6.30, shows the services offered to mothers and children in Asia.

* * *

Edward R. Murrow's spectacular second "Report From Africa" will be seen on channel 2 on Thursday. The hour-long documentary is due at 10 p.m.

Algeria, Libya, Ethiopia, Egypt and the Sudan are included in the countries to be visited by Murrow's "See It Now" cameras this week.

* * *

The award-winning NBC documentary, "Victory at Sea," will be seen again on channel 2, beginning on Friday with the opening chapter, "Design for War."

The televised history of Allied action at sea in all parts of the world is one of the best television offerings to date. It includes films taken by cameramen of all nations, plus thousands of feet of captured film.

The excellent musical score for "Victory at Sea" is played by the NBC Symphony Orchestra. The 26-week series will be seen each Friday at 10 p.m.

MONDAY HIGHLIGHTS

"Yellow Fin" is a movie about tuna fishing on channel 12 at 6.30.

"Wagon Tracks West" stars Bill Elliott and Gabby Hayes in a feature movie on channel 4 at 8.

Selections from "Faust" are heard on The Voice of Firestone concert on channel 5 at 8.30.

New color show from Seattle is "Color Fair," a variety program on channel 4 at 9.

Dramatic presentation on channel 4 is "Who," a story with a new twist, at 9.30 Monday.

Studio one drama on channel 2 is "The Genie of Sutton Place," at 10.

Channel 12 movie at 10.30 is "Fallen Idol," with Ralph Richardson, at 10.30.

A Mexican picture, "Pancho Villa Returns" is the channel 2 movie at 11.30.

Greats of Yesteryear Lacked Ability to 'Oink'

By JIM TAYLOR

Looking back at the hit parades of a few years ago made us wonder how many of the great bands and vocal groups would be as successful now as they were then.

Perhaps men like Dorsey, Goodman and Miller, if they were starting out today with their bands, would reach the same heights they attained in past years; but the thought here is that the vocal groups would find it tough sledding to compete with what we have today.

Groups like the Modernaires and the Ink Spots, who contented themselves with merely singing, probably would not sell at all. Because nowadays, if you just sing, you're dead.

In this era of rock and roll, it takes an unusual arrangement to sell a record, and there are a lot of unusual groups around to look after the arranging.

For instance, a record we picked as undoubtedly the worst of the year is selling like crazy. "You're the Apple of My Eye," featuring the Four Lovers, who sing with a stutter and make noises like pigs in the background, is already a hit and still climbing.

Rock and roll instrumentals we can take and like, but please, please, let's have more quartets like the Four Aces, the Four Lads and the Platters, and less like the Lovers.

People can only listen to someone going "Oink, Oink," for so long.

Gumpelzhiner Music Played by Quartet

Two small fantasias by Adam Gumpelzhiner were featured in a recital by the Corelli Music Chamber Society in the main studio of the Art Gallery last night.

The fantasias were performed by a recorder quartet, composed of Helen Poisson, Jim Mitchell, Lily Kay and Britta Runga. Other works featured were from the British Museum collection.

An intricate Beethoven duo was performed by violinist Bernard Rain and cellist Marguerite Hultgren.

Included in the varied program were Teleman's Quartet in G Minor (performed with recorder, violin, cello and piano) and a harp solo by Lorna Langley, who presented a Spanish group.

Rounding out the chamber recital was Beethoven's Quartet in B-flat Major. Artists were Carol McCartney, violin; John Sawyer, second violin; Gordon Tracy, viola, and Betty Tracy, cello.

Video Star Weds Realtor

NEW YORK (UP) — Audrey Meadows, who plays the harrassed wife of comedian Jackie Gleason on "The Honeymooners" television show, became a wife in real life Saturday. She married an Arlington, Va., realtor.

Miss Meadows, sister of TV performer Jayne Meadows, wife of Steve Allen, married Randolph Rouse at the Protestant Episcopal church of The Heavenly Rest.

PGE Terminal Site Chosen?

FORT ST. JOHN (CP) The Pacific Great Eastern Railway Friday took an option on 90 acres of land adjoining Fort St. John to the north.

Speculation among civic officials and real estate men is that the railway proposes to build its terminal on the site.

Air Force Day

RCAF Plays Host At Comox June 9

The sky will become the air force's parade ground June 9 at Comox air base when the public will be invited for the afternoon to witness annual Air Force Day celebrations.

Spectators will be drawn from just about every Vancouver island point to see the RCAF flex its defensive muscles in demonstrations of flying and the most recent developments in safety and electronic equipment.

Victorians are expected to make up the largest portion of the crowds. More than 2,000 residents of the capital made the 120-mile trip to the base for the event last year.

The fly-past this year will be composed of CF-100 all-weather interceptors, T-33 jet trainers, Lancaster reconnaissance craft, some of the planes participating from mainland bases.

The varied program will be spiced with bombing displays, high-altitude performances, sham air battles, precision and stunt flying.

RCAF also promises special rides for children, a continuously operating outdoor theatre and a special rest area for small children.

Size of the crowd will not pose a problem to the air force, one officer said. Last year more than 24,000 persons attended the show, coming in some 10,000 cars. All were accommodated without difficulty.

Pole Broke

Hair-Raising Rescue Saves Circus Artist

WASHINGTON (UP)—A beautiful young circus performer was saved from death or serious injury when her husband grabbed her as she plunged from a broken perch toward the tanbark 55 feet below.

The dramatic rescue evened a score for Elizabeth Nocks, 21, and her husband, Joseph, 24. Earlier this season he fell from a broken pole in Madison Square Garden—in New York. She grabbed him in the nick of time.

The Nocks perform a hair-raising aerial act from the tops of long, swaying wooden poles at the Ringling Brothers and Barnum and Bailey circus.

Friday night, as their "daring in the clouds" act was nearing its finale, the pole from which Mrs. Nocks was dangling head down by a footrope snapped with a pistol-like report. The crowd gasped as the pretty redhead started to plunge.

Her husband made a desperate lunge which brought his own perch near hers, and grasped her by her outstretched hands.

"It was the most wonderful thing I've ever felt in my life," she said later.

The girl fell 85 feet from a pole in her native Switzerland in 1952, and was out of action for nine months with a fractured skull and broken ribs.

Ministers Demand Clean TV

PITTSBURGH (AP) — "Why should we preach our heads off and then have the powerful force of television counteract our work with immoral shows?"

That question was asked Saturday by seven Pittsburgh ministers.

A spokesman for the Civic Central Ministerial Association said the "cleanup of television shows is even more important than removing improper literature from news stands.

"We can keep filthy literature out of our homes but it's impossible to keep our children from watching TV."

Ancient Tale Told Again In 'Cinderella'

By BRUCE LOWTHER

Mice will change into horses and a pumpkin will become a glittering coach as the audience watches—so say the people behind the "Cinderella" show in the Royal Theatre tomorrow evening.

It's staged by the Velda Wille school of dancing and sponsored by the IODE Esquimalt chapter. Sylvia Mobey is Cinderella. Barbara Hodgson becomes Prince Charming. Mickey Francis is the narrator. Bebe de Roland is assistant choreographer.

It's the same old, wonderful fairy tale, which brings up the point as to when the story of "Cinderella" first came to light.

Researchers have found "Cinderella" was born sometime between 1812 and 1815. She advanced in public esteem from her birthplace, Hanau, Germany, just about when Napoleon was retreating in disorder from Moscow back home.

"Cinderella" was anonymously-written. She existed in folklore long before the brothers Grimm—Jacob the scholar and Wilhelm the jovial lion of society—made her world famous.

As well as mice, pumpkins and princess, the show tomorrow also has the unpleasant step sisters, the fairy godmother and all the characters of this finest of fairy tales.

For the first time, Victoria groups are absent from the annual B.C. one-act drama festival in Nanaimo Wednesday through Saturday.

Island representatives, chosen at the recent regional festival here, are Courtenay, Yellow Point and Nanaimo. In all, 13 regional groups are taking part.

Another interesting up-Island event is the first Duncan appearances of the Victoria Symphony Orchestra. Two different Mozart concerts will be staged in spacious Cowichan high school Wednesday and Friday evenings.

Victoria Normal School students present their annual concert in S. J. Willis junior high school at 8 p.m. Thursday and Friday.

Rotary Boys' choir sings in Oak Bay junior high school Friday evening.

The bigger theatres have to take second place to their smaller brothers this week, as far as good films are concerned.

Twenty-Six Years Later

Good Samaritan Rewarded

BY GEORGE NICHOLSON

Twenty-six years ago Capt. George Hillier, Ucluelet resident and well-known west coast halibut fisherman, helped save the life of a Vancouver man who had suffered a heart attack while prospecting in one of the remotest parts of the island.

Unexpectedly, he is soon to be rewarded for that deed with an all-expense-paid two-week trip to Hollywood and an invitation to appear on TV.

Thomas Penfield Enterprises of California have advised him that they are preparing a national television show designed to honor and reward persons who have performed outstanding deeds of courage.

They plan to bring to Hollywood a number of such persons to appear on the program and also to present each with a medal and cash award, a sum yet to be determined.

In a letter to Capt. Hillier, they explain that his name was taken from a newspaper article written at the time of the incident. His address was not available but he was finally traced through the police.

ACCEPTS BID

Capt. Hillier accepted the invitation and will go to Hollywood this fall.

The incident occurred in May, 1930. Two Vancouver men, Harry Moll and W. J. Galligher, walked across the north end of Vancouver Island to prospect the rock-ribbed and wave-beaten promontory area near Cape Cook.

When about two miles from the sea, Moll was stricken.

His companion looked after him for four days. Then, after making Moll as comfortable as possible, he set out for the coast in hopes of finding a boat.

He made the beach at Peddlers cove, where he fortunately found an American fishboat sheltering from a storm. The American promised to notify the first Canadian boat he saw and if he failed to sight one agreed to come back the following night.

He met Capt. Hillier, who was with his brother Pete and Jack Kemp, fishing cod off Cape Cook. They immediately hauled in their gear and headed for the cove.

In spite of heavy seas, Capt. Hillier rowed ashore in a skiff, then walked through the dense bush and carried the stricken man to the beach. He placed the man in the skiff and despite the heavy seas managed to reach his fishboat.

They took Moll to the Port Alice hospital.

Cape Cook is the most desolate area on the entire west coast.

'Forced To Kill Baby'

Murderess Scrubs For 'Demon Lover'

BLOIS, France (Reuters)—Beautiful blonde Denise Labbe ironed her soldier lover's clothes in her prison cell Saturday while he read at leisure in the prison library.

Meantime, French newspapers returned to headline accounts of "the case of the demon lover" in advance of the trial Wednesday of Denise and the tall, dark soldier, Lieut. Jacques Algarron.

Denise, a former typist, and the artillery officer have been charged with murdering her two-year-old daughter Cathy by drowning her in a wash tub. The child's father, a medical student, deserted Denise after the child was born.

In the preliminary hearings, Denise testified that she drowned her baby as "a love sacrifice."

"I was the instrument of the devil—of my monster of a lover who held me in his power and made me his plaything," she told the court.

Denise alleged that her lover threatened to walk out unless she drowned the child.

Now, each week, with permission of the prison warden, she washes and irons his jail attire, mends holes in his shirts and socks and sends them all in a neat package back to him on Sunday.

Although the accused lovers are in nearby cells, they have not met since they were arrested 18 months ago—a few days after Cathy's body was found in the wash tub.

Algarron will see a different Denise in the courtroom Wednesday. His once-vivacious mistress has tied her shoulder-length blonde hair into a bun which gives her the appearance of a school mistress.

Do It Yourself

Stair Remodelling Easy For Amateur Carpenter

By J. RALPH DALZELL

Many readers are planning to remodel attics and basements and have asked how to improve the stairs leading to them. Two procedures can be followed, and the work is easy to do and materials are not expensive.

Picture V shows typical stairs with their parts named. Basement stairs seldom include the wall boards or the risers between treads. Attic stairs usually have both items involved. Where wallboards and risers are not included, follow this procedure:

Remove badly worn or dished treads and have a woodworking mill or shop sand them flat and smooth. After replacing them on the stringers, cut pieces of quarter-inch plywood to form risers. Nail them to the vertical edges of the stringers. Fill cracks, nail holes and the like with spackle or water putty and paint or enamel to suit.

More attractive improvements can be made on stairs having wall boards. If treads are worn have them sanded as explained. Add risers if necessary. If the stairs squeak, nail the treads securely to the stringers. Asphalt tile will improve the appearance of the stairs. Fit the tile to each tread separately as shown in picture W. Spread the recommended adhesive on the treads and apply the tile. Nail half-inch quarter rounds against the risers and screw metal nosing strips along the nosings to help keep the tile in place. Then paint or enamel the risers and wall boards as preferred.

Picture X shows typical details of the under side of stairs. Picture Y shows the grooves in a stringer. The ends of the treads and risers fit into these grooves and are held in place by blocks and wedges shown in picture X.

The glued joints of wedges and blocks sometimes break loose and allow the treads to spring when walked on. This causes squeaks. If the under side of the stair is open locate all loose wedges. Apply glue to them and then drive them solidly into place. Apply glue to loose blocks and nail them into position again with small finishing nails. If wedges cannot be removed, drive small finishing nails through them and into the treads and risers.

When repair work cannot be done from the under side, use two-inch finishing nails to fasten all squeaking treads and risers about two and a half inches apart as at point A in picture Z. Drive the nails diagonally through the treads and into the risers. Use a nail set to sink the nail holes and fill them with plastic wood stained to match the stair finish. If squeaking persists, drive finishing nails diagonally through the risers and into the treads as shown at Point B in picture Z.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Q.—How can grease spots be removed from new wallpaper?

A.—Mix Fuller's earth with a commercial spot-removing liquid. Apply the paste a quarter of an inch thick over grease spots, let it dry, and remove with a soft brush. Repeat if necessary.

Health Check for New Pupils Gives Children Flying Start

This is another article in a series especially written for The Daily Colonist by the Victoria-Esquimalt Union Board of Health, appearing each Sunday, intended to give readers helpful advice on health and welfare problems.

Many children will start school in September for the first time. It will mark a new pattern of living for all of them. Going to school is a big experience and parents can do much to help their children get ready for this new venture into life.

Your health department will help prepare your child for this big step by offering pre-school physical examinations. The school medical officer will be conducting these from May 28 to June 8.

Parents can arrange for an examination when they register their child at their nearest school. Although the number who can be examined is limited, those not able to see the school medical officer will be looked after in September.

Some parents prefer an examination by their family physician. This is also preferred by the health department as a family doctor often knows the child's past history and is able to check him over thoroughly. All doctors in the city have the necessary forms.

A good examination is important so that children enter school life in good health. Often defects and handicaps can be corrected before entering school. If not corrected they could seriously interfere with a child's progress in school.

Immunization protection should be considered too. All children should be protected against diphtheria, whooping cough and smallpox before entering school. A free immunization clinic is held at the Health and Welfare Centre every Wednesday afternoon between 2 and 4 p.m. for this purpose. Also check to see whether your child needs re-vaccination or "booster" shots.

Dental health is most important and an opportunity will be given for children to be seen by the school dentist during the summer months. Special clinics will be held during July and August at all schools.

Apart from physical health there are other things parents can do to make a child's introduction to school easier, such as teaching him to play with other children, to wash his hands, to tie his shoes, to use the toilet properly, and, in general to keep himself clean.

School will be exciting; school will be fun. Be sure your child gets sufficient (10 to 12 hours) sleep each night as his days at school will be full of excitement.

Continued supervision by the school health service can be expected. Turn to your public health nurse for guidance and suggestions on all health matters.

Your child's school life should start on a healthy note. Either take part in these examinations before summer or have your own doctor see your son or daughter. In this way you will help your child start off on even terms with all other children and you will know that their school work will not be hampered by ill-health.

Present Curfew Satisfactory City Police Say

Victoria police are reasonably satisfied with the present curfew arrangement for teenagers.

They want no part of the severe fines which Tacoma, Wash., decided this week to levy against "night owl" youngsters —and their parents.

This city's curfew by-law, passed November 15, 1943, requires the Phoenix Brewery to sound its whistle at 9.30 p.m. as a warning. Children under 16 must not be out after that without "proper control or guardianship . . or unavoidable cause."

Tacoma has decided that children 17 years and under must not be at large without supervision between 10.30 p.m. and 5.30 a.m.

Fines for juveniles range up to $100 or 30 days in jail. Fines for parents are $25 to $50 or 10 days for the first offence; $50 to $100 or 30 days for the second, and on each subsequent offence, $100 to $250 or 90 days in jail.

On the Tacoma plan, Police Chief John Blackstock said: "That's very fine if you have the staff to do the job thoroughly. At first, three or four men and cars would be doing nothing else at night but driving those children home."

To the fines, he indicated opposition, but would only say: "That's up to them if they wish it that way."

"We have little gangs but we take care of them," Chief Blackstock said. "But children at games, sports events, the YMCA—we want to encourage that."

He said he felt the best policy was no strict enforcement so long as children and parents realize the law is there if police need it. But there have never been any convictions under the by-law.

"On the whole, it's not too bad," the chief said.

The Car Corner

New Plymouth Fury Well-Behaved Bomb

By J. T. JONES

There may be better-handling cars than the Plymouth Fury built this side of the water, but I haven't found one yet. Going further, I haven't come across one of anything approaching the same size and weight that is any better, no matter where it comes from.

The much-touted feature of Fury—its tremendous power —is the thing about it that interested me least. Although it's unquestionably a bomb, the biggest impression it made was with its firm, superbly-controlled ride and its impeccable behavior on corners, which add up to an unsurpassed feeling of security.

This two-door hardtop is a kind of hybrid. It looks mostly like a Plymouth, and it has a much-modified Plymouth engine rated at 240 horsepower, but underneath it's mighty lak a Chrysler. Transmission and rear end are basically from its big brother, the New Yorker, and so are the springs and front sway bar.

Brakes aren't exactly power type, but have a vacuum assist like those supplied for police cars. Lining area is 173.5 square inches, which, with the car's weight of approximately 3,300 pounds, should be more than adequate for the kind of use the Fury can expect.

Getting back to the car's handling qualities, it has the very unusual passenger car arrangement of a higher roll centre at the front than at the rear. This may not sound like much, but its effects are important.

Everyone is familiar with the severe "diving" of most cars on coners. This is often lumped in with body roll as a general kind of bad behavior. But body roll is not necessarily bad behavior, although diving is. And diving is caused by low front roll centre and a high rear one—just the opposite of th Fury's.

Diving puts extreme loads on the outside front tire in corners, and takes almost all weight off the inside rear wheel. The latter leads to violent wheel-spin with consequent poorer control, and the former invites several forms of disaster. Fortunately, these traits become really dangerous at much higher speeds than anyone but a born fool would try—which may be nature's new way of weeding out the unfit.

The Fury sits down in corners much like an MG, its rear end leaning more than the front. As a result both back tires are firmly planted and the front suspension isn't wrenched to the limits of its travel, all of which means good control.

On loose gravel, which is the only place the Fury can be brokenloose at safe speeds, front and back wheels began slipping almost at the same time, and the car drifted through the corner feeling just like a boat. In a word, perfectly.

The only changes I'd like to see in the Fury have to do with the steering. I'd prefer it to be quicker, and I'd like the steering wheel farther away from me.

The Fury's ride, as mentioned earlier, is firm, and we had 32 pounds of air in the tires, which contributed a lot to its fine performance but not much to its smoothness.

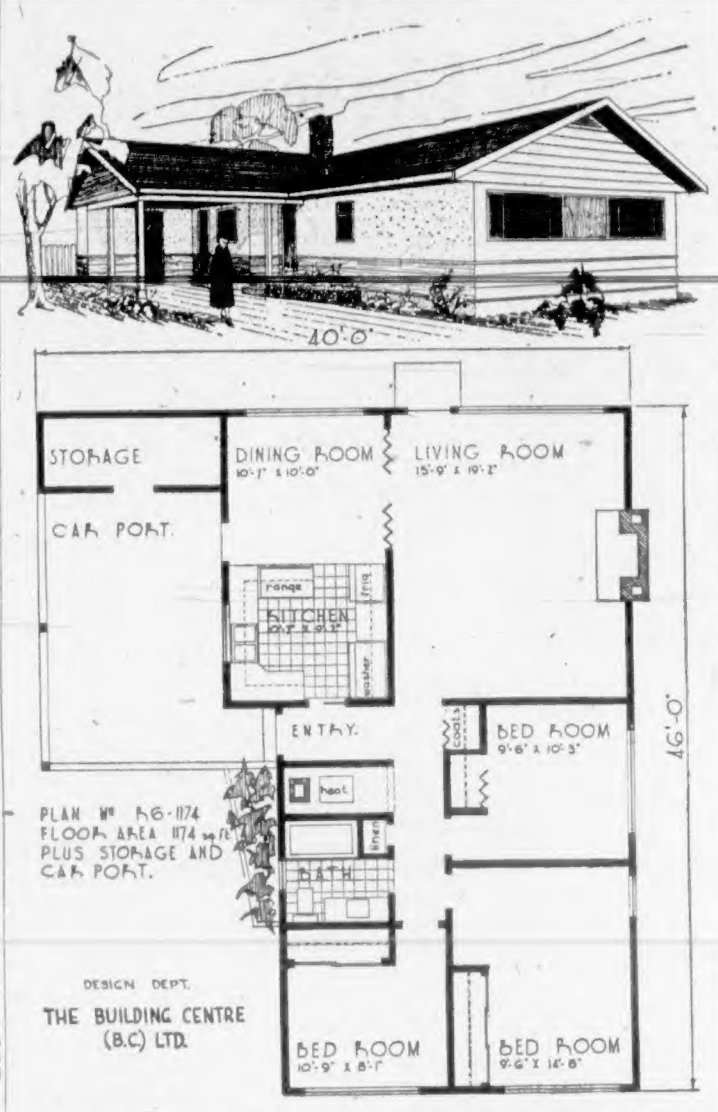
However, despite its firmness there was no jouncing on rough roads, and the ride was not in the least uncomfortable.

There are two kinds of comfort, physical and mental, and in the Fury, hard tires and all, the mental comfort of knowing everything was positively under control and all four wheels firmly on the road more than made up for the absence of a floating sensation.

I suppose sooner or later we had to get around to how powerful the Fury is. Well, its time from a standing start to 60 is somewhere around nine seconds and its top speed about 124, and if there's anybody not satisfied with that, let him go buy a Ferrari.

Personally, I'd be happy with an old flat-head Plymouth six in that chassis.

Three-Bedroom Home



A non-basement, three-bedroom home of only 40 feet frontage. The main entrance off the carport on the side is right at the kitchen door for convenience. The large living room and dining room are on the rear for either view or privacy. A large storage area is found in the end of the carport, which should be heated if you live in a damp climate. This house is designed to be built on crawl space of two foot, six inches, and first should have a two-inch thickness of concrete on the ground as a damp proofing. Working drawings are available for $25 for six sets of blueprints, Plan R 6 1174. Write for our new 50 Home Plan Book. Send 25c to cover cost of postage and handling to the Building Centre, 1240 W. Broadway, Vancouver.

Auckland Parades Homes

AUCKLAND, N.Z. (CP) — Instead of holding a housing exhibition or building individual display houses, the builders of Auckland put on display a whole street of new homes each year.

They take a vacant area, put down a road, and each builder completes one or two homes to his favorite designs. This year the display contained nearly 60 houses, all different and all incorporating the latest ideas of architects and builders in home design.

The display, termed the Parade of Homes, has become the biggest draw of any annual exhibition in New Zealand. This year half the entire population of the Auckland district attended.

Every house bears a price tag and as such can be so closely compared with its rivals, the competition between builders is intense. Furnishing firms co-operate by fitting out the houses completely and find the display a valuable means of bringing their lines before the public.

There is never any difficulty in disposing of the actual display houses. All are usually sold before the end of the two-week showing. In addition builders who show designs which take the public fancy get enough orders to keep them busy until the next annual display.

Most of the homes offered this year cost from $6,200 to $9,800, not including the price of the land.

Dr. Schweitzer Defended

NEW YORK (CP) — The last white woman to visit Dr. Albert Schweitzer at his jungle hospital in Lambarene, French Equatorial Africa, strongly came to his defence Saturday against charges made by a Presbyterian minister that the hospital is "filthy" and "white supremacy" is practiced there.

Blonde Marion Mill Preminger, who returned March 1 from her fourth annual pilgrimage to Lambarene, where she has spent hundreds of hours working with the famed doctor, said in an interview the charges are "very unjust to a saintly man."

Mrs. Preminger, who plans to return to Lambarene next December for Dr. Schweitzer's 82nd birthday, was replying to criticism made by Dr. A. H. Behrenberg, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, Metuchen, N. J., in an address before a Kiwanis Club luncheon meeting earlier this week in Perth Amboy, N. J.

Dr. Behrenberg said the hospital is "filthy beyond description" and "a color line is practised there which is more severe than anything found in Alabama." The pastor said he had spent one week at the hospital last summer.

The hospital is built like a native village to make the natives feel at home and this is very important, Mrs. Preminger said. There are no solid walls because in the 100-degree heat a person would stifle to death.

"It is a poor hospital with no water, no electricity. But it is a lighthouse to all other hospitals —as a symbol. It is the only hospital in the world which feeds, houses, clothes, nurses and medicates all its patients—and medicates with a very potent medicine called human kindness. . . .

"I can only believe the reverend, who is a medical layman, saw Lambarene with the eyes of prejudice or for some unexplainable personal grievance. The life of Dr. Schweitzer is so crystal clear, if it could be water you could drink it."

The problems at Lambarene are tremendous, the Vienna - born author said. There are hundreds of tribes and as many languages. Many patients come against the wishes of their tribal leaders, in many cases still strongly guided by witch doctors.

Westerners think of a hospital as being white and gleaming, but to a native's mind Lambarene, with its thatched wooden buildings, is the nearest thing to his primitive home. "The native has his wife, his children, his animals. He is at home."

Dr. Schweitzer, who with his wife started building Lambarene 42 years ago, now has a staff of three doctors and 26 hospital attendants. Black and white work together, Mrs. Preminger said.

Backed by a Spectacular Fulla, Timbermen Wallop Pils, 24-7

NANAIMO (Special) — Nanaimo Timbermen, free-wheeling it offensively as Fred Fulla's spectacular goal-keeping took care of much of the defensive chores, handed Vancouver Pilseners a merciless 24-7 thumping in an Inter-City Lacrosse League game here Saturday night.

Although playing without coach Harry Wipper and Bob Raffle, two of their regular defencemen, the Timbermen just couldn't be stopped as they whipped the ball around to pick up 20 assists on their goals and keep rookie-netminder Norm Lee busy with the 53 shots they fired his way.

VICTORIA	6	3	3	59	75	6
Vancouver	6	2	4	82	77	4

Last night's score: Vancouver 7 at Nanaimo 24.
Next game: Tuesday, VICTORIA at Vancouver.

STONE WALL

In fairness to the Pilseners, the play was not as one-sided as the score would indicate. The Mainlanders had plenty of chances as the goal-hungry Timbermen left Fulla on his own time and again but the agile netminder was just too good. It was considered one of the best games he has played in a starry career.

Standing out also in a team of standouts was Arnie Dugan, former coach. Dugan was at his best both ways. He scored once and drew credit for six assists but started many other scoring plays with his alert passing.

Dugan had plenty of help from Lisle Scott, who had two goals and four assists in another fine performance. Bobby Allen took 13 shots, scored on six of them and picked up three assists; elusive Don Sherry hit for four goals and Don Ashbee had three.

GET JUMP

Timbermen rolled to an 8-1 lead in the first quarter, were held on even terms in the eight-goal quarter, then got eight of the nine third-quarter goals as they turned it into a rout.

Sixty-two minutes in penalties were handed out, 38 to Pils. Bob Marsh of the losers got 12 minutes, 10 of them for hitting Bud Dumont on the head with his stick, while Bob Parry got a 10-minute misconduct. Dumont got five minutes for his part in the misunderstanding with Marsh.

Victory, sixth in seven games, third in a row and fourth at home without defeat, put Timbermen six points ahead of the second-place Victoria Shamrocks.

Long Sets Record

Braves Win Strange Tussle

Dale Long, sensational first-baseman of the sensational Pittsburgh Pirates, set a new major-league home run record yesterday but he had to share baseball headlines with Cincinnati Redlegs and Milwaukee Braves, who collaborated in an unusual game at Milwaukee.

The Braves were held hitless until two were out in the 10th inning and were within one of scoring a 1-0 victory in regulation time without getting a base hit. They finally won, 2-1, in the 11th inning, when they got the last two of their three hits.

Johnny Klippstein pitched seven hitless innings for the Reds and Dave Freeman pitched one, but Cincinnati went into the top of the ninth trailing 1-0. A hit batsman, two bases on balls and a sacrifice fly gave them the run in the second inning.

Meanwhile, Ray Crone had blanked the Reds and was only one out from a shutout when Ted Kluszewski singled and scored the tying run on a double by Wally Post.

Joe Black set the Braves down without a hit in the ninth and had two out in the 10th when Jack Dittmer singled for Milwaukee's first hit. In the 11th, Hank Aaron tripled with one out. Black then walked the bags full intentionally but Frank Torre, who had batted in the Braves' other run, came through with the game-winning single.

Victory kept the Braves in first place, increasing their percentage lead over the idle St. Louis Cardinals to 19 points.

PIRATES GAIN

The Pirates tied the Reds for third place, only a half-game behind the leaders, by downing Philadelphia Phils, 6-2, behind the effective pitching of Vernon Law.

In the eighth inning, Long broke a record he tied on Friday by hitting a home run in a seventh consecutive game. Lou Gehrig, Ken Williams, Willie George Kelly had previously George Kelly had the record of six straight games.

Long almost made it in the first inning when he doubled high off the right-field wall. He drove outfielder Richie Ashburn far back in the third inning and was robbed in the fifth when right-fielder Elmer Valo bounced off the wall after a spectacular, leaping stab of another home-run bid.

Up almost certainly for the last time at the start of the eighth, Long sailed one out of the park as lead-off hitter and was mobbed by his teammates in a wild home-plate scene.

Roger Craig kept Brooklyn Dodgers close to the pace by blanking New York Giants, 6-0, on three hits in the other National League game.

American League action was featured by the 9-4 thumping handed New York Yankees by Baltimore Orioles, who landed on Mickey McDermott in the first inning for four runs, then knocked out Gerry Staley in the second with another four-run rally.

Nanaimo Quartet Leads Point Race

Nanaimo Timbermen, averaging more than 16 goals a game for their first seven games and scoring 61 times in their last three games, are showing the way in individual scoring as well as in the Inter-City Lacrosse League race.

Bobby Allen, speedy Ontario import, took over the individual leadership last night from teammate Don Sherry as he scored six goals and got three assists in the 24-7 rout of Vancouver Pilseners.

MAKES SHOTS COUNT

Allen, leading in goals with 21, has 28 points. Sherry, who has made his shots count with 19 goals on 37 attempts, trails by two points. Sherry had four goals and an assist last night.

In third place, with 24 points, is Arnie Dugan, who is tied with Bill Bamford of Victoria Shamrocks in assists. Dugan picked up six of his 17 scoring passes as well as his seventh goal last night. He's two points ahead of teammate Don Ashbee, who is 16-6 and three points ahead of Bamford, fifth in the scoring race.

IT BEATS ME

By Jim Tang

Twelve games had been played in the Inter-City Lacrosse League when this was written and judging from what had happened, the fight for league honors, if any, will be between Nanaimo Timbermen and Vancouver Pilseners.

At the moment, the Timbermen appear to have caught the eye of most lacrosse followers. They can floor two good forward lines, a sound, high-scoring defence, and they still have Fred Fulla in goal. They are at least as strong as they were last season, when they were good enough to win the championship. From their championship club they lost scoring-champion Jim McNulty and a useful veteran, Bob Bremner. As replacements they have Harry Wipper and Bob Allen.

Most fans will agree that the edge in that exchange, if any, is with the Nanaimo club.

Victoria Shamrocks, closest to the Timbermen when league play ended last season and their superiors in the playdowns, are perhaps 35 per cent weaker than the club which won the Mann Cup. After losing a half-dozen of their stars for various reasons, they have been beset by injuries and received the crowning blow when illness deprived them of the services of goalie Gordy Johnston for at least most of the season.

The Shamrocks are quite capable of finishing as runners-up but it would be too much to expect that they still have enough left to beat out the Mann Cup conscious Timbermen.

New Westminster Salmonbellies may be a better club than they were last season but they have far too much ground to make up to be considered any threat except, perhaps, for the last playoff spot.

That leaves Pilseners, it says here, as the only logical club to challenge the defending champions but unless coach Jake Proctor gets his best talent playing at its best soon, Timbermen may repeat by a margin of as much as 15 points.

Proctor, however, has talent available and the best chance of giving Timbermen a tussle. He has some fine youngsters who figure to improve as they gain more experience, and it has been obvious his veterans are not yet in condition. If he can keep his best players coming out for games, he can make it tough.

So, from this corner, it now looks like Timbermen to repeat followed by Pilseners, Shamrocks and Salmonbellies, in that order. And it wouldn't be too surprising if the Shamrocks move either up or down a notch. They can go either way, depending on their luck from here.

Random Harvest

From a Nanaimo source comes word that it wouldn't be surprising if the Shamrocks wind up with ex-Timberman Bob Bremner after all . . . and the same source has it that the Timbermen are not at all certain they will be able to use Ronnie Jay, the Ontario junior star who was supposed to have come with Bobby Allen. Question of residence rules, the fellow says. . . . Don Hamilton is giving it a battle as a replacement and the youngster will undoubtedly improve but the Rocks have been missing Geordy Johnston, who was great in their first two victories. . . . Charlie Strouiger, who lives right on the spot, and brother Jack found some excellent fishing yesterday in Cowichan Bay. After watching salmon pursuing schools of herring, they raked some minnows, boated an 18-pounder and a 14-pounder and lost four other good-sized springs . . . and from Eric Barnes at the Anchorage Boathouse comes the report that anglers were scoring yesterday between Tod Inlet and Willis Point. A school of jacksprings has improved fishing which has been poor for the past 10 days or more. . . . Pittsburgh Pirates are baseball's biggest surprise this season and, it had to happen, have already had their first request for world series tickets. And it wasn't from staffer Dave Brown, at the moment Victoria's happiest baseball fan. . . . Nanaimo Timbermen almost had John Lumley back this season, only a last-minute hitch keeping him in Ontario. Lumley, incidentally, had a fine hockey season with Owen Sound Mercurys, scoring 22 goals and getting 22 assists in 48 games. . . . Baltimore Orioles have spent more than $600,000 for bonus baseball players and are still waiting for one of them to become a regular while the star of the club this season has been George Zuverink, a 29-year-old righthander picked up for the waiver price of $10,000. In an individual performance which rivals the tremendous hitting of Mickey Mantle and Dale Long, Zuverink has retired the last batter in 13 of the first 15 victories scored by the Orioles this season . . . and then there was the headline in a Seattle newspaper which read "Farmer, 84, claims he is father of most sons—13." Couldn't help wondering if the proper thing to do wasn't to claim all 13 . . . and tonight's final thought is that we'll have to change our milkman if I hear that awful singing commercial once more. Someone opened the refrigerator door during the last rendition and the milk curdled, in shame, I'm certain.

Polyettes Come Close In Bid for Top Berth

Victoria Polyettes came within one error of climbing into first place in the Major Women's Inter-City Softball League standings last night, as they dropped a 4-3 decision to Vancouver Crowhursts at Central park.

Polyettes, playing their first season of senior "A" softball, battled the unbeaten Crowhursts on even terms through the early stages but an error by third-baseman Lorna Luney cost them two unearned runs in the fifth inning and the Victoria team couldn't quite overcome the deficit.

Last night's score: Crowhursts 4, Polyettes 3.
Next game: today, Crowhursts vs. Polyettes, 1.30, Central park.

CAME FROM BEHIND

John Oster's Polyettes came from behind to tie the score at 2-2 in the fourth inning, getting their first two hits off Crowhursts' Ev Bonneville. However, a walk, a sacrifice and a fielder's choice put runners on first and third for Crowhursts in the fifth with two out and the Polyettes' third sacker bobbled a ground ball that chased in the go-ahead run and set up another.

The losers' got one run back in the sixth on a walk and a double by Monica McKenzie, and had runners on first and third base in the seventh when the game ended.

Ruth Oster held Crowhursts to four hits, while Miss Bonneville gave up five hits and struck out two.

Second game of the series will be played this afternoon at Central park, starting at 1.30 p.m.

Baseball Postponed

Farmer Construction's Northwest International Baseball League doubleheader with Deming, scheduled yesterday at Royal Athletic park, was postponed because of wet grounds.

Farmers make their first road trip today, playing in Burnaby this afternoon and at Bellingham tonight.

Willoughby Stretches Stock-Car Win Skein

Dick Willoughby became the first driver in the three-year history of Western Speedway to capture three successive stock car main events Saturday night when he grabbed the 25-lap feature after a stiff battle with Jerry Sylvester and Lamont Brooks.

Willoughby, who has won three of the four main events held at the Millstream road track this season, took the lead from Sylvester on the 10th lap, then held off a pressing Brooks on the final two laps. Sylvester, who held the lead until the final lap of Monday's holiday feature, took third place for the second straight time.

Brooks won the trophy dash but lost out to Willoughby after a close tussle in the first heat.

Seven cars were knocked out of competition in races leading to the main event and three more cars were forced out of action in the feature.

Results:

Main event: 1—Dick Willoughby, 2—Lamont Brooks, 3—Jerry Sylvester.
Trophy dash: 1—Lamont Brooks, 2—Ray Pottinger, 3—Bert Gilmour.
First heat: 1—Dick Willoughby, 2—Lamont Brooks, 3—Mike Newton.
Second heat: 1—Jerry Sylvester, 2—Ray Pottinger, 3—Dick Varley.
Third heat: 1—Dave Hansen, 2—Chris Benson, 3—Dave Francis.
Mechanics race: 1—Frank Addison, 2—Ray Newton, 3—John Gelling.
Flindold race: 1—Olier Newton, 2—Mike Newton, 3—Jerry Sylvester.

Next game, today: Firefighters vs. Re-Refined Oil.

Firefighters, who trail undefeated Brodies Bakery by one game, get a chance to slice the margin today when they tangle with winless Re-Refined Oil in the senior "B" softball league game at Heywood Avenue park at 1.30.

Brodies chalked up their fourth straight victory Friday night by downing Melrose Service, 10-8, on the strength of a two-run homer by Bill Harris in the sixth inning.

Oarsmen Seek Coaches, Active Members

The Victoria City Rowing Club, pushing for new members and anxiously seeking coaching talent, will hold an important meeting Monday night at the Club Tango, Oak Bay avenue, to discuss plans for the season.

The club, formed last year by members of the now disbanded JBAA organization, has a membership of 43 but is seeking more active members in an effort to build up the calibre of rowing on Vancouver island.

Biggest need, however, is for coaches. Dan Moses, outstanding rower in Victoria a number of years ago who coached the club last year, is now in hospital. Officials of the club have urged for anyone with coaching experience to attend Monday's important meeting.

The organization's one-acre site at Elk Lake, which was cleared by club members last year, offers prospective members fine facilities. Members have constructed a shell house and float and hold workouts at the lake every Sunday morning.

Two of the big events on the club's agenda this year are the annual Kelowna Regatta and the Northwest Pacific Amateur Oarsmen's Association championship. Inter-club regattas involving crews from Vancouver and Victoria are also expected to be held.

Victoria rowers received little competition last year because of the building program but the previous year, under the JBAA banner, a senior fours crew competed in the British Empire Games trials at St. Catherines.

In 1953, a Victoria novice fours crews turned in an outstanding record in Pacific Northwest competition and won every race it entered.

Monday night's meeting at which an election of officers will be held, will start at 8.30. Anyone wishing further information is asked to phone Ken Kitchen at 3-1350, Bill O'Briain at 2-1037, or Brian Palin at 2-5056.

Nanaimo Jets Here Tonight

Victoria lacrosse fans will get their first look at the newest entry in the Senior "B" Lacrosse League tonight when the Nanaimo Jets take on Jokers at Stevenson park.

Jets were thumped, 16-8, in their home opener by Foul Bay Tuesday. Jokers have been beaten in both of their previous starts.

Because of tonight's game, which starts at 6, the Foul Bay practice originally scheduled for tonight will be held this morning at 10 at Stevenson park.

ELDERS BEAT VENTURES

Ben Johnson, Eric Monk and G. Hansen shared pitching duties as Elders defeated HMCS Venture in a men's softball game played at Sooke last week.

Notice of Meeting

The Annual Meeting of the Senior Members of the VICTORIA FIGURE SKATING CLUB will be held in the Victoria Curling Club (Upstairs) on Tuesday, May 29th, at 8.00 p.m. All Active Members are asked to attend.

Friends and Parents of Members Are Welcome Also!

Is Soldier's Rip on Way Out As Mecca for Tuna Anglers?

By DAL WARRINGTON

Salt water anglers around the globe may soon get the answer to a momentous question.

Is Wedgeport, Nova Scotia, still the world's best tuna fishing spot? Or, is fabulous Soldier's Rip finished as the mecca of millionaire anglers?

Wedgeport Worries

Scenes like this were the rule in 1937 at the famed tuna fishing grounds off Wedgeport, N.S., as some 37 fish were caught as compared to the 1955 total of 1,774 taken at Soldier's Rip. Last year was the worst ever at Wedgeport, and citizens of the fishing port are worried that tuna fishing may be finished.

Switch to Golf Stance Starts Topeka Hitter On Home-Run Spree

By British United Press

A casual remark by the manager of a class "A" team has set off the biggest home run hitting spree of organized baseball in years.

Buddy Bates, manager of the Topeka Hawks in the Western League was clubhouse chinning with his first base [illegible] and Bates [illegible] Lefty [illegible] Weygandt assumed a batting position and Bates suggested he try it in that night's game at Amarillo, Texas.

Weygandt at the time was [illegible] a creditable .296. But that night in a double-header he tapped out five home runs and was convinced his manager had something. The next night Ayres hit three more homers in a single game against the same club.

14 IN SEVEN DAYS

The club made a long jump to Albuquerque, New Mexico and Weygandt swatted two more round trippers. The home run spree started May 13 and in the next seven days the 26-year-old hard picket hit 14 homers. He boosted his batting average to .400 and Topeka was [illegible] games.

The folks at Topeka thought so highly of Weygandt that they gave him a "night" when the club returned home May 21. The first baseman showed his appreciation by hitting safely three times — a double and two singles. Topeka won the game and tied [illegible] for keeps.

Weygandt is a six foot two inches who weighs in at 195 pounds and starts in several sports. He earned letters in baseball and swimming during his school days at Highland Park, Michigan and the University of Michigan. He has played professional baseball since 1951 in the Canadian Provincial League with Three Rivers, Quebec, with Norfolk Portsmouth in the Carolina League and Binghampton, New York in the Eastern League.

EXCITED ABOUT FAME

His wife Marcy has as much praise for her husband as does his manager. She says Al is full of good humor and as excited about his new found fame as can be. And Marcy is a typical baseball wife. She loves the game and thinks his home-run binge might be the boost Al needs to send him to the majors.

Technically Weygandt is the outright property of the Topeka Hawks. Business manager Chuck Ennis has no illusions however that if the New York Yankees want him they'll get him. Ennis expects that the Yankees [illegible] Veteran Lawrence [illegible] winter. They sent the Topeka club with a notice that if Yankees wanted him he would cost $[illegible] or [illegible].

Ennis watched Weygandt for a few games and measured the [illegible] well before the [illegible] deadline but in [illegible] baseball [illegible] Ennis is sure that if the Yankees want to reclaim the slugger they can and probably at the same $100 figure.

Al himself is taking all the fame in stride and hopes to prove his week-long home run feat was not a flash in the pan. Weygandt says he is going to find out his manager's formula for successful hitting until he finds out if it will work permanently for him. Bates says at least 70 per cent of batting skills is in the stance, 20 per cent in the roll of the hips and arms, 10 per cent in the swing.

He has convinced Weygandt so far.

Similarity between a baseball and golf stance is shown in these two pictures as demonstrated by baseball's Jim Gladd and golf's longest hitter, George Bayer. To give full treatment to a baseball or golf ball both hands must be behind the bat and club. (UPC)

By REV. WILLIAM HILLS

Liberal Arthur Reaume of Essex North stood up in the Ontario legislature on Tuesday, March 27, to propose that sweepstakes be employed to finance a hospital insurance plan for the province.

[illegible]

"Mr. Reaume did not specify what the other things were but Premier Leslie Frost was quick to reply when the opposition member sat down.

"This involves moral questions," countered the premier of Ontario, "and moral questions are highly important. A large segment of our population has very strong views on this sort of thing.

[illegible] Premier Frost continued. I know the strongest views against doing anything that might undermine the moral [illegible] strong moral foundations."

Then Mr. Frost went on to observe that all countries which legalize sweepstakes have had to sell tickets in other jurisdictions where sweeps are illegal.

"Our province will not do business this way," he declared.

Whereupon Liberal Reaume was quick to assure the legislature that his suggestion was his own, and that "it's not something we've talked about in the Liberal party."

Now, in view of the fact that Bingo has become a matter of comment in the press, I thought it would be useful to place [illegible] before the house.

Dedicated as the Kinsmen Club is to sound community life, especially amongst the young, it would appear that the Kinsmen endorse an activity which the premier of Ontario fears will undermine the moral foundations of the people, for gambling is gambling no matter what form it takes.

Ontario Levy Available By INCO Shareholders

By HARRY YOUNG
Colonist Business Editor

Some time ago this column pointed out that estates containing shares of companies with share registers in Ontario or Quebec might be clipped for the provincial succession duties of one or other of these eastern provinces, even if held in the name of a B.C. resident.

A number of companies promised they would investigate the possibility of avoiding this injustice.

The latest reply comes from International Nickel Company of Canada, the country's biggest dividend payer and also a company whose stock is widely held in British Columbia.

Because of this and because the writer, F. M. A. Noblet, treasurer of the company, offers a means of averting the difficulty, I am publishing his letter.

I have delayed acknowledgement of your letter as I wished to obtain some background of the example you had cited. Having been under the impression that any provincial duties could be [illegible] against domicile [illegible]

"I have had the facts of the example [illegible] but I understand there were some unusual circumstances in the case [illegible] to the amount of the provincial duty.

"In the case of the International Nickel Company of Canada, the provincial duty can be avoided as we have a co-transfer agency in New York in addition to transfer offices in Toronto, Montreal and London, England.

"I am informed by our solicitors that in the case of shares of this company registered in the name of residents of British Columbia there is no need to pay any Ontario duty if transfer is effected by our transfer agency in New York, the Bankers Trust Company, 18 Wall Street.

"[illegible] a consent from the Ontario Succession Duty commissioner is still required but one will be issued when the application requests that the transfer be [illegible] the transfer [illegible] outside the province of Ontario. In such cases no tax assessment will be made with respect to the shares.

"I must add that a transfer in New York would not subject the shares to any U.S. death taxes," said F. Noblet, treasurer, International Nickel Company of Canada Ltd.

Confirmation of Mr. Noblet's statements were provided me by Andrew B. Weir of the Royal Trust Company in Victoria.

Mr. Weir said his trust was in the process of putting through a waiver of succession duties by the Ontario and New York State authorities.

He also pointed out that there had been no abnormal delay in getting the clearance from either source.

This, however, was in contrast with experience noted by other trust companies. Both S. J. Crawley of National Trust and Douglas Abbott of Canada Trust offices in Victoria have come up against considerable delays when effecting clearances in the United States.

In this respect it is interesting to note that different [illegible] are required for different companies.

Mr. Weir points out that under the new U.S. clearance required for International Nickel, it is from New York State the Nickel company [illegible]

Pattern Set in Council Vote

BY BILL MAVOR

President of the new Victoria Labor Council will be from a C.C.L. [illegible] if present recommendations of the units committee for merger of Victoria Labor Council and Victoria and District Trades and Labor Council, TLC.

The C.C.L. council is second to the TLC group in the number of unionists represented but the recommendation follows a pattern set in other cities.

The committee, comprising executives of each council, is proposing that the C.C.L. [illegible] the presidency and second vice-presidency, and the chairmanship of two committees.

The TLC will provide a first vice-president and secretary-treasurer and chairmen for six committees.

The will chair the legislative committee and the C.C.L. the political action committee.

The proposals are subject to approval by individual meetings of each council. Elections will be held separately by the group [illegible] for Congress [illegible]

Jack Macgregor, president of local 1-85 International Wood Workers of America is the most likely to be the new president of the merged council.

George Leatherdale, present C.C.L. council president, could become second vice-president of the merged body.

Robert Barrie, of the chemical and explosive workers' union, likely would become first vice-president of the merged council. He is now TLC council president.

Percy Rayner would fill a full-time secretary's job.

The first merged meeting could be late or late.

Week-End Holiday—For Some

By CECIL CLARK

A MUSCULAR, 200-pound six-footer, 34-year-old navy veteran, Art Brookman, can be found most any day behind the counter of his Craigflower grocery out at the end of the Gorge Road.

[illegible]

OCEAN MONSTERS

For fisherman Brookman even after basking sharks, [illegible] fish are right around biggest in the world. Only the whale shark is bigger. These monsters are fairly numerous off the west coast of the Island running up to 30 and 40 feet in length.

It was 28 years ago when he was working on a government survey ship that Art Brookman first felt the urge of [illegible] contact with the offshore monsters.

On his first annual sharking trip, about four years ago, he used a rod harpoon and found that the shark took straight to the bottom, he rolled around on it and held it up. And in the colony has only shaky hide [illegible] through the smallest possible crack. So Brookman [illegible] to a detachable head on a steel wire leader.

Sport of Good Fellows Long Fostered By RVYC

By FRANK M. KELLEY

FAVORED with wide stretches of tidal waters surrounded by green, forest-clad hills and majestic mountain heights, there is no wonder that some Victorians of the long ago fed their eyes on the sun-kissed Strait of Juan de Fuca.

The ensemble of outdoor loveliness made them ardent devotees and numbered them among the very first residents of this evergreen playground to take advantage of the amenities it provides for the possessor of a pleasure craft capable of being wafted about by the breezes encountered during much of every 12 months.

According to the record Victorians were the first to succumb to the magic of sunshine the appeal of the breeze and the romance of sparkling waters [illegible] become pioneers of sailing on the northwest.

Boys Keep B.C. Forests Green, Camps Clean

By ERITH M. SMITH

THE PEOPLE of British Columbia owe more than they know to the summertime activities of about 400 boys and youths—and, more, to the men behind them.

These are the lads who go out, most of them from high school, to work in the province's forests in one of two groups: under the Youth Training Plan, or as Fire Suppression Crews. Both are operated by the B.C. Forest Service.

The Youth Training Plan was devised in the depression years as a compromise idea to train boys in the care and conservation of B.C.'s forests and incidentally an extra spare pair for the work that might be done each summer in the province's campsite and public sites.

There is no feeling about that phase [illegible] either. The boys seem to know what they are out for. They [illegible] and ready and hear to respond [illegible] to the figures. And they [illegible] hugely — and return home bronzed, heavier, stronger and healthier as pups.

Duncan Scene Of Concerts By Symphony

The Victoria Symphony Orchestra will present two Mozart concerts in the Cowichan High school auditorium at Duncan Wednesday and Friday evenings at 8:30 p.m.

Members of the orchestra including at least seven soloists will be the same as those who presented a successful series of Mozart concerts in Victoria recently, director Hans Gruber said.

Tickets are on sale at several stores in Duncan, Ladysmith and Chemainus at $2.50 for adults for both concerts and $1.00 for students for both concerts. There will also be a door sale.

Mr. Gruber said that unless at least 150 adult series tickets or their equivalent are sold in Duncan, he may be forced to cancel the concerts.

* * *

ALBERNI — The city's old fire bell, a relic of Alberni's earliest days, is not for sale.

A request from Tom Shewish to purchase the bell for the Indian village church was turned down by city council.

Mayor Ben Wright said the 700-pound bell, considered too heavy to be raised over the present fire hall, should be mounted somewhere for use as an auxiliary alarm.

* * *

LADYSMITH — Final returns of the Red Cross drive here have not reached $1,000, treasurer Herbert Clayton has reported.

* * *

COURTENAY—Application of Ernest Dresen of The Pas, Man., has been accepted by city council for the position of city engineer. Mr. Dresen has been with the C.N.R. for the past 11 years.

Nanaimo Water System

NANAIMO (BUP) — The Greater Nanaimo water system, when completed, will be ample for 65,000 people, C. F. Newcombe, chief commissioner, told Nanaimo Rotary Club Friday.

Tenders for the last phase of the $2,000,000 system will close June 11.

Mr. Newcombe estimated that the water board will have saved $100,000 on original estimates.

The project, which entails moving a mountainside back 15 feet to complete the two-and-a-half-mile link, may be delayed by the current woods closure that went into effect this day.

Mr. Newcombe told the meeting the system will be able to pump 1,000,000 gallons of water a day into any outside area and handle 65,000 people and in a pinch, up to 80,000.

* * *

COURTENAY — A nomination convention has been called for July 7 at Bowser by the Comox Social Credit Constituency Association to name a candidate for the next provincial election. Dan Campbell and Harry Harris, both of Courtenay, have indicated their intention to let their names stand as nominees.

* * *

ALBERNI — A request for a plebiscite on store closing hours was received by city council from Alberni district joint labor council. The organization will be informed that a plebiscite would not empower council to amend the closing by-law as hours are set by petition of a majority of the merchants, officials said.

* * *

COURTENAY—Two money by-laws will be presented to the taxpayers of Courtenay by the city council shortly. One will be to raise money for a program of sidewalk building and the other is for the drainage of the north-west corner of the city. The engineer's report is still not completed so the exact amount of money required for these projects is not yet known.

* * *

ALBERNI — Aldermen Fred Bishop, Terry Norwood and C. M. Bear have been named by council as an "exploratory committee" on B.C. centennial observances in this district.

Council decided that the committee should consult with representatives of other sections of the district in order that joint plans for the celebrations could be made.

Logger Injured

CAMPBELL RIVER — Fred Ruff, about 40, a logger at Hall Point Logging on Sonora island north of here, was flown to Lourdes Hospital Friday suffering a broken leg and chest injuries.

He was injured when a log he was bucking rolled on him but his condition is now reported as good. Making the emergency flight was Ron Reaville in a B.C. Airlines seaplane.

* * *

COURTENAY—Millar McGill has been named president of the Comox District Teachers' Federation, succeeding Archie Dick of Tsolum.

Other officers are Henry Schellinck and J. R. Hindle.

Named to the North Island District Council of the B.C. Teachers' Federation were Eric Haffenden, Archie Dick, Gus Vesterback, E. R. G. Richardson, Dan Campbell and J. R. Hindle.

LADYSMITH — Herbert McKeen succeeds Jack Ware as president of the Kinsmen Club here.

Other officers are D. R. McLennan, I. D. Rogers, Gordon Peach and Douglas Matson. Directors are Jack Tukman, Rob Stillin and R. M. Atwood. J. S. Cliffe and Norman Slessor have become honorary members.

ALBERNI—A meeting of city council members and organizations and individuals interested in development of Stirling park will be held at the scene Monday, 7.30 p.m., to discuss plans for the area.

Compensation Asked

VANCOUVER (CP) — Action has been started in Supreme Court for Mrs. Olive Petrie of Campbell River, B.C., seeking compensation for the death of her husband here last Nov. 27.

Mr. Petrie was a passenger in a car which ran off a wharf into Burrard Inlet. His body and that of Daniel William Assu, a Cape Mudge fisherman, were found in the Assu car. Mrs. Petrie's suit is against the Assu estate and is based on the charge that the owner was guilty of gross negligence.

* * *

ALBERNI — A preliminary report on a proposed sewer system for the city, read at council meeting Friday night, includes a suggestion for the "lagoon" type of treatment plant.

The report from Associated Engineers Ltd. proposed that about 10 acres of land on the west side of Somass river be acquired for the Lagoon. Council authorized an enquiry of MacMillan & Bloedel Ltd. on the availability of a portion of lot five for the purpose.

The engineers stated that a number of independent systems will be necessary to serve the city because of the topography of the area. It is proposed that two systems would serve the main part of the city betwen Rogers creek and Kitsuksis creek with all sewage from below the 25-foot level to be pumped across the Somass through underwater pressure lines to the treatment works.

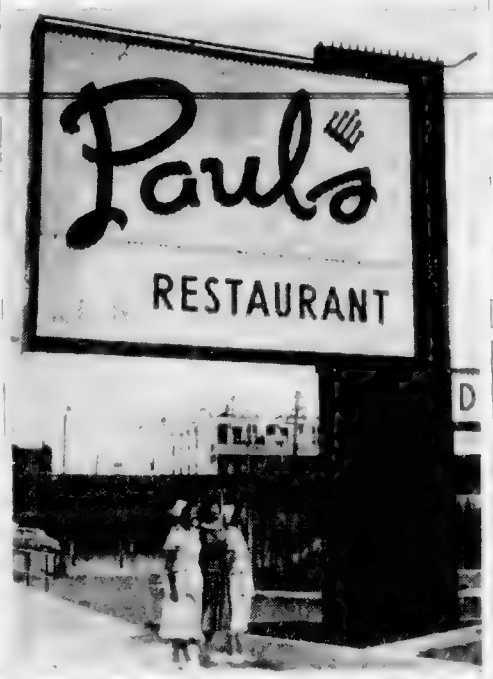
Giant Plastic Lure



Billed as the largest of its kind in the world, this huge plastic neon will lure diners to the new Paul's drive-in, opening about June 7.—(Colonist photo by Jim Ryan.)

Water Spouts by 'Magic'

Newest Restaurant Last Word in Frills

By DAVE FRANCIS

Opening about June 7 under the largest plastic sign ever built in the world, is Paul's Restaurant, a super-modern drive-in costing $200,000.

Located on the west side of Douglas street between Chatham and Discovery, the new second restaurant is surrounded on three sides with parking space for 44 cars.

Customers will be able to park in 24 spaces on the north side and receive car hop service, or park on the other side and walk into the restaurant.

OPEN KITCHEN

A counter surrounding a front kitchen which is in open view of customers will seat 16.

Booths have been located so that waitresses will not bump into customers. They are to serve food over the low inside wall of the booths, while customers enter from the outside.

The plastic sign, standing about 30 feet high at the front of the parking space, was built by Plexiglite Plastics Ltd., of Vancouver.

Fluorescent lighting inside white panels reflected sheet [illegible] ing, dominates the board letters "Paul's Restaurant."

Equipment in the [illegible] is completely electric [illegible] and modern.

This includes four electronic water stations. A waitress simply has to place a glass under a spout and an electric eye turns the water on.

A waitress in an adjacent kitchen in the rear, much larger than the front-end kitchen will prepare most of the food for the restaurant, as well as for Paul Anka, other restaurants in the Dominion and Sussex hotels.

Most of the equipment is on wheels and can be easily moved [illegible] and plugged into floor outlets.

Equipment and food for serving customers in their cars is also located in the rear kitchen.

Contractor for the restaurant was W. M. Sutton and Sons of Victoria. Charles E. Chang of Victoria was the architect.

The restaurant will be open from 7 a.m. to 8 a.m.

Loyalty Probe Demanded

BCPC Accused of Favoring 'Big Boys' by Hiking Rates

Increased rates of the B.C. Power Commission have prompted an angry demand that "the motives and loyalties" of top commission officers be investigated.

A charge of breaking faith with electricity consumers and subsidizing "big industry and the B.C. Electric, Victoria" was levelled yesterday by the Mid-Island Electrical Association.

According to the association, percentage increases in cost, due to the new rate announcement Friday, will range from 11 to 14.

"The feeling in some quarters is that the motives and loyalties of the commissioners and top management of the B.C. Power Commission should be investigated," said the [illegible] Nanaimo.

CALLS ON PUBLIC

[illegible] them two months ago the Power Commission has not yet considered any proposals other than those affecting new contracts for large blocks of power.

[illegible] from this we would assume that he meant the pulp mills and the B.C. Electric Co., Victoria," the statement said.

"It would appear that as so many of the marginal areas of B.C. have been supplied with power at the public's expense and have now become revenue-producing that now the 'big boys' of private industry want to move in and take over."

"At the same time that we have been notified of an exorbitant increase in rates, the B.C. Electric Co. in Victoria is revising its rates downwards to make electric heating a very attractive proposition. This despite the fact that the B.C. Power Commission is supplying power to Victoria wholesale, now enjoy [illegible] and is supplied by the B.C. Power Commission."

ALL USERS

[illegible] Power Commission has [illegible] all users. [illegible] Commission of rates [illegible] Association [illegible]

At [illegible] the same R3 rates:

Consumption	Present Cost	New Cost

2000 kwh	$24.01	$32.15
3000 kwh	$31.46	$48.20

"We can assume from these figures it will no longer be an economic possibility to heat a home with electricity," says the association.

Fame and Fortune Await Miss Canada

There's a hunt on — for the most beautiful girl in Canada.

Some happily endowed young lady, between the ages of 18 and 26, is going to win the Miss Canada pageant queen's award pocket $1,000, pack gift luggage with a magnificent wardrobe, travel by air to London, where she will take a screen test, and return to participate in the Miss America contest at Atlantic City.

And fame and more fortune could await her there.

The Miss Canada contest is being sponsored here by the Hudson's Bay Company, which has assorted prizes for the winner and 10 finalists, and the Odeon Theatre group.

A LONG HAUL

It's a long haul to the ultimate victory. For [illegible] the Victoria winner goes to [illegible] June 18 [illegible] she semi-finals at Vancouver [illegible] B.C. [illegible] Hamilton [illegible] expenses [illegible] the Miss Canada final, July 2 to 7.

For the Canadian queen comes the trip to England, the screen test and the opportunity to compete for the Miss America title and $26,000 more in prizes.

Entries close June 10. Elliott [illegible] Brown, Odeon manager here, said [illegible] last night.

The Victoria contest will be June [illegible].

"We think we have every prospect of producing a Miss Canada, if not a Miss America, right here," he said. "Victoria and district is famous for the beauty of its young women."

Entry forms and rules can be obtained from the Hudson's Bay Company store, the Odeon or Plaza Theatre.

Victoria judges have yet to be selected.

MARILYNNE TOO BUSY

Marilynne Dawson chosen Miss Victoria at the Junior Chamber and other to wind May queen decided to enter the new contest.

"I would like to take part," she told The Daily Colonist. "But I'll be too busy [illegible] getting ready to represent Victoria at the PNE in Vancouver in August."

Reprisal Gesture?

Vandals Smash Up 18 School Windows

LADYSMITH — Vandals believed to have been "[illegible] goddess" acting in reprisal for being denied entrance to the school grounds, have smashed 18 windows in the Junior Senior High school here.

The windows including two [illegible] Saturday night [illegible] estimated at $150.

Also smashed were six windows in a new greenhouse at the back of the school, a project of the industrial arts class.

Officials laid the blame on out-of-town hotrodders and said [illegible]

Sidney Driver Clocked at 90

A juvenile driver clocked by a RCMP car at a speed of 90 mph on the Patricia Bay highway Wednesday was fined $25 and $5 costs in Sidney police court yesterday. His license was suspended six months.

Another juvenile was placed on probation for six months and charged $5 in costs in the same court for careless driving in Sidney.

For Tax Fund Proposal

Ash Wins Backing Of Voters' Group

A special committee set up by Saanich Voters' Association has fully endorsed Reeve Arthur Ash's proposal to use tax sale land funds for construction of an addition to the municipal hall.

Following a recent meeting with the reeve, the group urged the general membership of the organization to vote in favor of the financing scheme on a referendum ballot when the date is set by council.

Mr. Ash will outline the new council's achievements and future plans at the next general meeting of the association at St. Luke's hall, Cedar Hill cross road, Thursday at 8 p.m.

Ratepayers will be asked to support the Elk lake group's policy of developing their area as a park. The group will also seek a solution from the membership of the Gordon Head transportation problem through extension of bus lines or development of feeder lines.

Forecast Cloudy But Warm

Clouds will hang over Victoria most of today but the weather will be fairly warm.

The weatherman's prediction is for variable cloudiness and winds blowing from the south-west at 15 miles per hour.

High temperature for the day is expected to be 62, with a low of 40.

LADYSMITH — More than $1,200 was realized in the Red Cross campaign for funds at Ladysmith, putting the branch here well over the top, campaign manager Mrs. C. F. Armstrong has reported. She said the public had been "exceedingly" generous in their donations and support.

Forest Infractions

Fire Equipment Law Broken by Loggers

Two south Vancouver Island loggers were fined in Colwood RCMP court Friday for infractions of the Forest Act in regard to fire-fighting equipment.

S. E. Arden, operating in the Malahat district, was fined $50 and $4 costs and Gerald Van Hombeck, Goldstream district, fined $25 and $4 costs.

Arden pleaded guilty to the charge. Van Hombeck entered a plea of not guilty but was convicted.

Forest Service officials said both operators had some fire-fighting equipment but it was not what is specified in the Forest Act.

Island Fishermen Angle for Crests

By ALEC MERRIMAN

Anglers all over Vancouver Island are out this weekend attempting to win one of the King Fisherman Prince Crests which will be awarded by The Daily Colonist this month.

Forty crests will be given away this month including 20 to the fishermen catching the biggest spring salmon, and the same number to trout anglers.

In addition The Daily Colonist will award a hidden weight prize to some lucky subscriber who has caught and entered a fish this month in the King Fisherman contest.

Spring salmon have provided most of the sport in the contest which opened May 1, and so far 43 entries have been received in this category. Many weigh-in stations still have to report.

It appears that it will take at least a 12-pounder to win a crest this month, for already weighed in are five springs over 20 pounds and six over 15 pounds. But all fish registered by Colonist subscribers will be entered in the hidden weight contests, both for this month's prize and the motorboat and other prizes at the end of the contest.

Rob McDonald's 28-pound 14-ounce spring caught at Deep Cove will be hard to beat this month. Spring entries have come from all over the Island.

Any Vancouver Island resident may enter The Daily Colonist King Fisherman contest. Subscribers to this paper are eligible for trophies, crests and all merchandise and hidden weight prizes, but non-subscribers may only compete for trophies and crests.

However, anglers may subscribe to the Colonist at any one of the more than 80 weigh-in stations, and if a subscription is ordered before going fishing any fish caught is eligible for all phases of the contest. One subscription covers the entire family.

The contest continues until Oct. 31 and Prince Crests will be awarded each month for the 20 top fish caught in each category — trout, coho, tyee and spring salmon.

Engagement of Interest

Brisket Point Practical, Tender and Tasty Meal

By EDITH SMITH

The social editor said: "Why don't you write us a column on cooking?"

Naturally, I was taken aback. Then a shock. Then a process. Then the idea began to germinate.

Let's get the bad news out of the way first, though. Even if there weren't a chance that the family and especially the male might read it, I'd have to confess I'm [illegible] kitchen type [illegible]

But there are a few memories involving camping days or home emergencies. And there are a few ideas.

Just for the record, too, I won't work over the old theme that men must be the best cooks because all famous chefs are men. Nor will I give more than passing mention to the fact that the two experts on cooking who have done best in the TV quiz shows are men.

Let's just say I know what I like and, sometimes, I know how to get it that way.

One never to be forgotten memory was a camping breakfast more than 25 years ago. It was very simple too — just eggs, bacon, fried potatoes, coffee.

[illegible] good? The eggs was on the [illegible] and was an open grill over the fire. The bacon was cooked [illegible]

Spoilage Cut Down

Kitchen Life Different When Food Irradiated

By MARGARET McGREGOR DILLON

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. — [illegible]

[illegible]

That is the aim of research projects on the irradiation of foods by various government and industrial agencies trying to find the answer on how to irradiate foods successfully without injurious effects.

[illegible]

KEEP FOR DAYS

[illegible]

Plenty is being done about it. Many research agencies scattered about this country are studying the problem. One is the Southern Research Institute here.

[illegible]

[illegible] tests tried all the available types of rays which came from the spectrum in early experiments. They found gamma and beta rays most suitable for irradiating foods.

[illegible] produce radioactivity. The beta rays do—only when used in large doses. So it's gamma rays they're using for most of the testing.

[illegible]

Viewing the picture nationally, we should not expect to see meat as a pantry shelf product in the near future. The scientists tell us that it will be several years probably before all the questions are answered.

6 CARDS OF THANKS

We wish to express our sincere thanks to the many friends and [illegible] for their kindness, cards of sympathy and beautiful floral offerings during our bereavement and death of our son, John Elmer Astrope. Many thanks to Dr. Spencer and staff of St. Joseph's Hospital, Major Oakley and Reg Miller, and McCall's Funeral Home. Mrs. Gladys E. Astrope, Mr. W. Astrope and family.

Mrs. Fred Lee wishes to thank Dr. Parsons and staff of Kamloops, their kind and sympathetic attention, and especially for the floral offerings. Special thanks to Sgt. or Major Oakley for his kindness and sympathetic help. Special thanks to Sands Mortuary, Spencer Chapel, to Dr. Perry for his kindness and sympathetic care and staff of Royal Jubilee Hospital, for the loss of a dearly loved husband.

ADAM—In loving memory of our dear father, Louis P. Fenwick, who passed away May 27, 1953.
—A dear remembrance to her. Mother, Brother and Sisters.

FENWICK—In loving memory of our dear father, Louis P. Fenwick, who passed away May 27, 1953.
He has gone across the river,
To the shores of evergreen,
And we long to see his dear face,
But the river flows between.
Just a token of love and remembrance
To a father who was one of the best.
The boys that he missed on life's highway,
May he find in God's garden of rest.
—Sadly missed by Bob, Muriel and children.

DORAM—In loving memory of our Dad, Frank Ingram, who passed away May 27, 1948.
Oh! for the touch of a vanished hand and the smile of a face so dear.
—Ever remembered by his loving wife and family.

THORNHILL—In memory of our beloved infant daughter, who passed away May 27, 1955.
Sadly missed but in our heart
You are always there.
—Mummy and Daddy.

6 IN MEMORIAM

ADAM — Nee Flora Peters, passed away May 28, 1951.
— Always remembered by her Mother, Brother and Sisters.

FENNELL — In loving memory of our dear father, Leslie P. Fennell, who passed away May 27, 1954.
He has gone across the river,
To the shores of evergreen.
And we long to see his dear face
But the river flows between.
Just a region of love and remembrance
To a father who was one of the best.
The one that he missed on life's highway
May he find in God's garden of rest.
—Badly missed by Bob, Muriel and children.

INGRAM — In loving memory of our Dad, Frank Ingram, who passed away May 27, 1944.
Oh! for the touch of a vanished hand and the smile of a face so dear.
—Ever remembered by his loving wife and family.

THORNHILL — In memory of our beloved wife, daughter, who passed away May 27, 1955.
Sadly missed but in our heart you are always there.
—Mummy and Daddy.

Set well back from the road on a 116x186' lot, this particularly lovely 4-year-old home will surely meet the requirements of the most discriminating buyer. From the front of the attached double garage, wide steps lead to a very nice weather-protected entrance. A well-proportioned L-shaped through hall gives access to: a large living room, full-size dining room, a completely modern kitchen and utility, a lovely birch-panelled study, bathroom with built-in vanity, two twin-size bedrooms. There is a full cement basement with attractive maid's quarters and an excellent hot-water heating plant. The house is completely insulated and the doors are weather stripped. The very best of workmanship and planning went into this home. The floors are ¾" oak throughout. The house is mostly tastefully decorated and the whole property is immaculate. Quite frankly this home carries our highest recommendation in all respects. It can be inspected by appointment only. An exclusive listing with F. N. Cabeldu Ltd.

Winning Contract

By HOWARD SCHENKEN and RICHARD L. FREY

(Look at only N–S cards)

Vul: N-S

♠ 4
♡ A 10 7
◊ A Q J 7 6
♣ Q 8 6 3

WEST (D)
♠ 10 9 6
♡ 9 6 5 3 2
◊ 9 3
♣ A J 5

EAST
♠ K Q J 7 5 3 2
♡ K 8
◊ 5 4 2
♣ 4

SOUTH
♠ A 8
♡ Q J 4
◊ K 10 8
♣ K 10 9 7 2

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
1 ♠	Dbl.	4 ♠	5 ♣
All Pass

You are invited to take South's seat in a match game against the English team. (Indeed, you would probably have been welcome to any of the American's places, for after taking a licking in the World Championships our team stopped off in England and absorbed another beating.) West's opening lead was the ten of spades (we'll let you in on the fact that his bid was a psychic). After winning this trick with the ace, how do you play so as to make five clubs a certainty?

As described in Bridge World Magazine, this is almost a textbook example of safety play. The only possibility of losing the contract is if you lose two clubs and a heart. You can't change the position of the king of hearts, if it is offside, but you can play so as to get the trumps out before a heart lead can be dangerous.

You can afford to lose two club tricks provided you don't lose the first one to West. If East wins the first trump lead, he can't do you any harm by leading a heart. So, your first play is to lead clubs and. If West plays low, you let it ride.

Take your thumbs off the East-West cards and observe the reward. If you played the trumps in any other way, you'd have to make a good guess in order to bring home the game. But, by playing safe, you lose only one club trick. That gives you time to draw trumps before the dummy's long diamonds and make six.

South might consider a stronger bid than five clubs. If North's hand included the ace of clubs, North-South might make a slam. Four no-trump by South is a god bid. In this case, it's just as well he didn't make it. North would bid five diamonds and get set with a singleton club lead.
